Harpster Builds State's Largest Automated Dairy Facility

Taking time from giving some of his cows their first experience in a double-40 milking parlor, R. Wayne Harpster talks to his daughter Christina. The Evergreen Farms' huge dairy facility is the largest commercial dairy herd in the state.

SEVEN STARS (Huntingdon Co.) — R. Wayne Harpster squinted as he assessed the scene.

He was standing in the middle of one of two new freestall dairy cattle barns, each 888 feet long.

They are designed to house the state's largest commercial milking dairy herd under one roof — more than 1,500 milking cows.

The area is large enough to house a respectable livestock auction.

From where Harpster stood, the lofty, insulated and vented roof stretched out in opposite directions and seemed to disappear on both horizons.

The distance is beyond the normal ability of the human eye to make clear distinctions, especially with the sunlight coming in from all sides and softly diffusing into

Ag Progress Issue Coming

The time for the annual Ag Progress Days in Rockspring is here again. Show time is Tuesday, August 18 to Thursday, August 20. Next week's issue will feature full preparation coverage with maps, lists of exhibitors and a program guide to help you find your way at Penn State's research farm.

In addition, numerous articles will give background on the many subjects covered at this machinery demonstration and educational attraction. And advertisers will have messages about their products that will be on display.

State Pseudorabies Recommendations

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — An evening meeting of swine industry representatives and state Department of Agriculture officials was held July 29, at the state agriculture building.

The meeting resulted in eight recommendations for the control of pseudorabies, a viral disease occurring primarily in swine.

The recommendations are:

1. Emphasis should be placed on the proper identification of blood samples taken at the slaughter house for pseudorabies surveillance testing. Coordination of blood samples with back tags is frequently not as accurate as it should be, thereby minimizing the effectiveness of tracebacks.

2. Movement of quarantined pigs to non-infected areas should be restricted and limited to counties free of pseudorabies.

3. Biosecurity and sanitation of buying stations, slaughter houses and swine conveyances associated with these facilities should be strengthened.

4. Because Pennsylvania is a major player in regional and national marketing of swine, efforts to eradicate pseudorabies from Pennsylvania should be coordinated with neighboring and all other northeastern states.

5. Vaccination of farms bordering infooted herds is essential to prevent the spread of pseudorabies.

6. A successful program must have four key components, as follows:

• Herd management plans for all infected herds.

• A successful testing program.

Youth Grant Awards Listed

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The funding of 45 grants under the Agriculture and Rural Youth Organization Grant Program was announced this week. According to State Agriculture Secretary Boyd Wolff, the grants were available to organizations such as 4-H and FFA.

"We were pleased at the overwhelming response to this program," Wolff said. "We received many more good applications than we could fund."

The organizations were able to apply for direct grants of up to $2,500 and matching grants of up to $15,000. Direct grants will be used to fund educational projects,

Chester Holstein Picnic Set

OXFORD (Chester Co.)—The Chester County Holstein Picnic is scheduled Thursday, August 13, at the Dunwood Farm of Alvin Stoltzfus. The farm is located along Route 896, one and one-half miles north of Russelville. Starting time is 10 a.m.

The Dunwood herd average is over 24,000m; 950f; 3.3%p with a BAA 106. Half the herd is classified Excellent or Very Good and many in the herd are from the Dunwood Golden and Cola families.

Speaker for the picnic is Dave Rama, Delhi, New York. Rama is a Holstein merchandiser and reader of pedigrees. His subject will be "Breeding To Merchandise."

A pork roast dinner is planned: adults, $4.00; children, ages 4-12, $2.00; and children under 4 are free. Call Ken Unble now for reservations. Phone: (215) 593-2274.

From sunup to sundown brothers Gene, right, and Jim Schopf are either picking produce from 40 acres to stock four of their produce stands or caponizing chickens. "We might be young, but we got lots of experience," said Gene, who estimates that he has caponized 50,000 chickens.

Schopf Brothers: Entrepreneurs

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SILVER SPRING (Lancaster Co.) — Gene Schopf started his first business when he was only a senior in high school. Eight years later, he has several thriving businesses, which include owning a farm, a custom caponizing business, and a produce business established at four different Lancaster County locations.

"My brother Jim is my sidekick," Gene said. The two brothers share more than almost identical appearances. They are both extremely energetic and enthusiastic about their work.

"We work hard, but it's enjoyable," Gene said of their 18-hour days that sometimes extend to midnight. "The harder you work, the better quality you get, and the more things you sell. You can't run a part-way business and be successful."

The brothers, who grew up on their father's (Ed Schopf) farm in Mountville, learned to caponize chickens at an early age. The boys

Northeast Chicken Parts

Wednesday, August 5, 1992

Trucklot buying interest ranged light to very good. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts were at least adequate for current needs; some product still moved at 2.20 but most new trades were booked at 2.15. Retail demand was slow and disappointing, food service demand was fairly good. Line run breast supplies were tight but most buyer needs were covered at steady prices. Legs, thighs, and drumsticks cleared to a fairly good demand. Leg quarters were short of an active demand and prices trended higher.

Wings were available at current prices but buying interest improved.

Prices were unchanged. Buying activity was mixed as buyers continued to press for lower prices and sellers asked higher prices in line with costs. Raw materials were sufficient to cover current schedules. Floor stocks were heavy and easily satisfied trade inquiry.

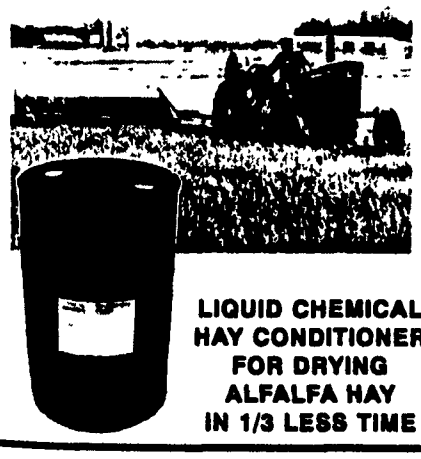
SWATHER'S CHOICE
ALFALFA HAY CONDITIONER
NEW!



LIQUID CHEMICAL HAY CONDITIONER FOR DRYING ALFALFA HAY IN 1/3 LESS TIME

Alfalfa and other legume crops have a coating of wax. While this coating is a natural protection for the growing plant, it is an inhibitor to moisture loss in field curing and to feed utilization in the digestive system of ruminant animals. The presence of this coating of wax also makes the hay stem brittle and less palatable to livestock.

Swather's Choice "washes off" the outside waxy coating of alfalfa, allowing for the water inside the plant to evaporate more rapidly than in untreated hay. Swather's Choice is actually a soap that is safe for livestock consumption and won't affect palatability.

In studies at Michigan State University, hay treated with the ingredients in Swather's Choice had higher protein and lower fiber. In a further study at Utah State University, cows consumed 2.2 pounds more treated hay per day.

Unlike conventional granular drying agents, Swather's Choice is a liquid chemical hay conditioner. It is easily tank mixed with water and requires only fifteen gallons per acre in most applications, compared with the conventional products that are normally applied at 30 gallons per acre.

OPINION

Accountability Requirement

Pennsylvania's dairy and livestock industry could be severely damaged if the state legislators do not do an about face on the issue of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine. Last year, the school received 40 percent of the operating funds from the state. This year, the new proposed state budget eliminates all this funding, and the school may be forced to close.

The veterinary school is needed. We already have a shortage of large animal veterinarians. In addition, the school's economic impact on the state is approximately $1 billion.

With the closing of the school, New Bolton Center in Chester County, a hospital for large animals, will be closed. So will their mobile unit and diagnostic center. And research on Lyme disease, Salmonellosis, Rabies, Swine T.B., and Johnes disease will cease.

On the other hand, it should be noted that since this is a private school, no public disclosure is given on how the public funds are used. One influential agribusiness person said that some research and consulting work, especially in nutrition, competes with private enterprise. Nutritional research would be better done at Penn State by nutritionists rather than veterinarians.

In a recent open letter to the members of the General Assembly, Pennsylvania Budget Secretary Michael Hershock called attention to the special deal the school has with New Jersey, Delaware and Connecticut. According to Hershock, these states have contracted with Penn to guarantee enrollment for 56 of their residents. As part of the arrangement these states pay a state subsidy of between $14,500 and $14,865 per student. Pennsylvnia's students at Penn cost the Commonwealth $63,883 per year.

We support the efforts to help retain Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine. But if public funds are expected to keep the school open, then public accountability of how those funds are spent is also a requirement.

NOW IS THE TIME

By John Schwartz
Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Evaluate Worming Programs

One of the greatest health problems for sheep and goats is internal parasitism.

Significant death and production losses still exist in some flocks even when aggressive deworming programs are employed.

An effective method of monitoring the efficacy of deworming programs and the degree of parasite burden in small ruminants is to conduct periodic quantitative fecal flotation examinations.

Veterinarians working regularly with small ruminant producers want to know fecal results expressed in eggs per gram (EPG). By monitoring the EPG of a group of animals before and after deworming, the effectiveness of the treatment and of its timing may be evaluated

Do not waste money using the wrong anthelmintics. Consult your veterinarian and set up a testing program for your flock.

To Scout For Corn Rootworm

Two species of corn rootworm (northern and western) are present in Pennsylvania. These species have similar life cycles, except the western corn rootworm tends to hatch about 3 to 5 days earlier in the spring.

Corn rootworm beetles begin to emerge during late summer (mid-July to mid-August). It is at this time that corn fields that will be planted back to corn should be scouted.

Based on beetle counts now will determine if a control program will be needed next spring.

Rootworm beetles begin depositing eggs in corn fields approximately two weeks after they emerge. The eggs are deposited in the soil around the base of corn plants, where they remain until the following spring.

Larvae begin hatching from eggs about mid June. The larvae stage inflicts the most severe damage to corn plants.

Typically, 2 to 3 years of continuous corn are necessary before economically harmful numbers of rootworm build up in the field.

Rootworm beetles have begun to hatch in Lancaster County fields. Now is the time to scout your corn fields. Here's how:

- Step 1: Once the first beetles are observed, begin looking for gravid females. Gravid females have a swollen abdomen full of eggs. A squeeze on the abdomen will discharge the eggs.
- Step 2: When 10 percent of the females observed are gravid, begin beetle counts.
- Step 3: Examine two plants in 40 different locations in the field.
- Step 4: Approach the corn plants slowly to avoid disturbing the beetles. Grasp the corn silks at the tip of the ear in one hand and without shaking the plant, cut off the ear tip. Hold the silks tightly in your clasped hand.
- Step 5: Count the beetles on the remainder of the plant. Start at the bottom and work your way up to the tassel. Count the beetles on the top and bottom side of the leaves. In hot weather, pull the leaves away from the stalk and count the beetles in the sheath.
- Step 6: Open your hand slowly and count the number of beetles in the silks.
- Step 7: Record the number of beetles found on the plant.
- Step 8: Resample the fields every 7 to 10 days until the number of beetles per plant begins to decline or until the economic threshold has been obtained. The economic threshold is two northern or one western beetle per plant in first year corn fields and three northern or 1.5 western beetles per plant in continuous corn fields

If you have any questions on sampling procedures, contact your local county cooperative extension office.

WHAT REALLY MATTERS
August 9, 1992

Background Scripture:
1 Timothy 6:2c-21
Devotional Reading:
1 John 3:7-12.

Paul never said, as some suppose, that money is the root of all evil. What Paul said was that "love of money is the root of all evils" (1 Tim.6:10). If our churches were to ask each of their members to sign a statement to that effect, I'm sure there would be few to refuse or disagree. We all acknowledge it, almost without exception.

Yet, though all or most of us would gladly agree that dependence on material things is contrary to the gospel of Jesus Christ, most of us seem to live as if material things are what really matter. Most often in our society, when spiritual and material interests are in conflict, the material interests almost invariably win out. I realize that is a sweeping statement, but, before you disagree too heatedly, take a look at your daily newspaper or the evening television news; in each story or report what motivates the person(s) involved? If it is not money, it is what money can buy—or what we assume money can buy.

THIS CRAVING

So, when it comes to the spiritual vs. the material, it matters little what we say on this subject, if material things dominate the lives that we lead. Paul suggests that material things become so important to us that they become a substitute for God: "...it is through this craving that some have wandered away from the faith and pierced their hearts with many pangs" (6:10b). That is also why Jesus said, "You cannot serve God and Money". If you serve the one, you cannot also serve the other.

In the preface to his Night unto Night, Philip Wylie says that "Materialism is man's defiant attempt to overshadow destiny with the panoply of cities, the hurtling activity of his body, the absorption of his five senses through ceaseless compulsion — with toys and furnishings, games, stone jewelry, and fine possessions—with listening and looking and smelling and touching and tasting—with all and everything that serves to stave off introspection for a minute, an hour, a lifetime". Things keep us from being aware of God or even realizing our need for Him.

NOT TO BE HAUGHTY

Things also tend to make us arrogant and proud. Paul says, "As for the rich in this world, charge them not to be haughty, nor to set their hopes on uncertain riches but on God who richly furnishes us with everything to enjoy" (6:27). Actually, the rich person is falsely secure, for the things to which he looks for his comfort and his salvation can neither save him, comfort him or even be taken along in death.

Note, that Paul never says that we shouldn't have and enjoy things, but only that we should not depend on them and live for them. It's not the things that are our problem, but our love of them, our tendency to act as if things are what really matters.

LITTLE HILL FARMS
THE JAMES HILL FAMILY

BROWN'S

A FAMILY DAIRY BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE

Trading New Jersey Holland Dutch Dairy Neighbors For Lebanon County, Pennsylvania Dutch Neighbors

THE JAMES HILL FAMILY

Jim & Billie Hill, daughter Terry, and son Rich are all involved in the day to day operation of Little Hill Farm. They are pictured with Lodestar Ovation Banner who is excellent at 90 points, freshened in November at 6 years 8 months of age and is projected in 305 days to milk 26,759 lbs. of milk, 968 of fat and 806 of protein. She is bred back and due to freshen again in 367 days. The Hills have been Brown's customers for over twenty years in two states. They moved from New Jersey to Pennsylvania in 1987 to escape the urban sprawl and quickly adjusted to their new Pennsylvania Dutch neighbors.

Shasta - First Homebred Excellent

This Bell daughter is an example of the type of cows the Hills are building on. Her records speak for themselves.

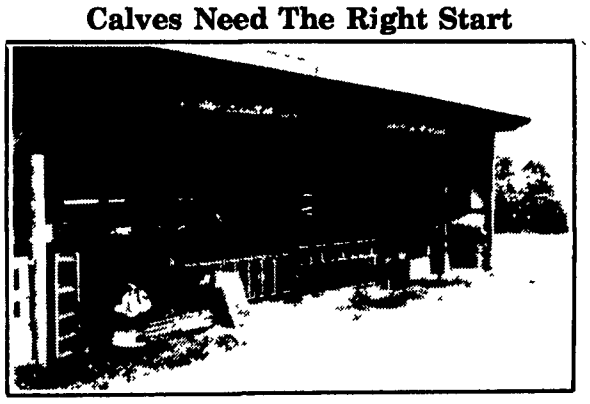
Age	Days Milked	Milk	Fat	Protein
2-0	365	23,488	755	719
3-5	296	23,524	811	716
4-5	365	32,208	1064	950
5-7	305	30,458	878	860
	Proj.

Shasta is due back in less than 12 months. Breeding is important to Jim and Rich. They feel Brown's Prolac helps get cows in shape faster for rebreeding and prolongs milk peaks.

Management A Key To Success

A clean barn and clean cows helped Little Hill Farms achieve the top award for low somatic cell count in Lebanon County with Swiss and third with Holsteins. With a rolling herd average of nearly 21,500 lbs. of milk for Holsteins and over 19,000 lbs. for the Swiss it is easy to see their management rates near the top. Haylage, corn silage, wheatlage, and mixed hay make up the forages fed at Little Hill. Brown's 38 Milkmaster, Jim's own roasted beans and ear corn make up the majority of the dairy grain mix. Jim said when they moved their herd average dropped but that Brown's Area Directors Dave McCracken and currently Dennis Kulp got the herd moving in the right direction again. Their goal is to continue to keep the herd healthy and milking well.

Calves Need The Right Start



A good environment and Brown's 20/20 Quick Start, Calf Starter, and Calf Grower get calves growing quickly.

New Heifer Barn A Real Labor Saver

With the new heifer barn just erected, Jim and Rich can keep a closer eye on the heifers and control feeding, breeding & herd health.

You are cordially invited to visit Little Hill Farms for the Lebanon County Holstein Field Day and Picnic on Thursday Night, August 13th at 7:00 PM. The farm is located on Mt. Zion Road just north of Mt. Zion and south of the Swatara Creek.

Topdress with New & Improved Ultra:Lac 22 Plus

New and improved Ultra:Lac 22 Plus helps your top producers maintain production all summer long. And that means your milk income doesn't have to go down when the heat goes up.

Nothing robs a cow of her ability to make milk like the draining effects of heat stress, especially in early lactation. By increasing dry matter intake, stabilizing rumen fermentation and decreasing electrolyte imbalances due to fluid loss, Ultra: Lac 22 Plus helps keep heat stress down and production up. And that takes a lot of stress off you.

New Ultra:Lac 22 Plus features greatly improved palatability for increased dry matter intake, utilizing the well-known benefits of MEGALAC® rumen bypass fat, along with a specialized blend of proteins, vitamins, minerals, sodium bicarbonate and Dairyman's Edge.

So don't wait until the temperature is over 75°. Ask your Agway Farm Enterprise Salesperson about the benefits of new and improved Ultra:Lac 22 Plus today.

DON'T LET PRODUCTION GO DOWN WHEN THE HEAT GOES UP.

See Your WL Alfalfa Dealer For Your Fall Alfalfa Seeding Needs.

W-L measures success one grower at a time.

We could show you stacks of research data that demonstrate the benefits of planting W-L alfalfa seed, but the most important barometer of our success is the success of growers like you.

Growers have depended on W-L Research as a provider of superior alfalfa seed for over thirty years, and in that time W-L has developed seed well-known for its value. At W-L, "value" is defined as long-term yield, persistence, and quality. These characteristics of W-L varieties are the cornerstone of our success, and we continue to measure our success as we always have — one grower at a time.

Forage Ahead with W-L!

SRBC Meets

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC) met on July 9, at the Robert J. Bielo Building in Harrisburg.

The commission restructured its 1993 budget and work plan to reflect a more realistic statement of the commission's work program in relation to available monetary resources. Staff presented a report identifying the key initiatives for the first six months of the fiscal year.

In other meeting action, the commission adopted a resolution honoring Herbert M. Sachs, who had served as Maryland's alternate member of the commission.

Mr. Sachs has left Maryland state service to become executive director of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

The commission also heard reports on the status of the proposed Pennsylvania Water Management Act and the Dock St. Dam Hydroelectric Project.

Staff presented a slide show and brief program commemorating the twentieth anniversary of the Tropical Storm Agnes Flood. An accompanying story written by SRBC Civil Engineer, John D. Graham, entitled, "Twenty Years after the Agnes Flood: The Lesson We Have Learned is That We Haven't Learned our Lesson," was distributed to the commission. Copies are available upon request to the commission.

The commission adopted staff recommendations with respect to the disposition of the following project dockets: Union Township Municipal Authority; East Cocalico Township Authority; Taylor Packing Co., Inc.; WHB Properties, Inc.; and Newport Borough Water Authority. The docket for Bethel Township, a ground-water withdrawal application, was removed from the aganda due to the failure of the applicant to reach agreement with a nearby private well owner.

The next meeting of the commission is tentatively set for September 10, 1992 in Annapolis, Md.

On July 8, the commission had toured a tile drain/ground-water nutrient monitoring site operated by commission staff at the Paul Clugston Farm near Halifax, Dauphin County.

Gardener Open Tour Aug. 15

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — On August 15, the Penn State Master Gardeners invite you to visit the Idea Garden that has been created at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster.

The Open Garden Tour is from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Idea Garden is comprised of two sections: the Annual Border and Perennial Border. The Annual Border consists of more than 1,500 annuals of various varieties and colors.

The four goals of this garden are to show the gardening public new varieties of annuals, to show the gardening public the impact of mass planting instead of lining plants in rows, to show various color combinations, and to beautify the Farm and Home Center.

The Perennial Border is just as exciting with more than 1,000 plants. The goals of this garden are to show perennials that bloom over a long period of time, need little or no care, have few or no insect or disease problems (there are no fungicides or insecticides used in this area), and to select some "unusual or under-used" perennials.

Martins Shine At Shippensburg

BETH MILLER
Franklin Co. Correspondent

SHIPPENSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Lester and Douglas Martin were all over the winner's listings during the Jersey Show held recently at the Shippensburg Community Fair.

The Martins, operators of Pleasant Valley Acres of Chambersburg, probably could have used a bushel basket to carry their winnings home.

For starters, they captured the coveted premier breeder's award and the equally prestigious premier exhibitor's award. Both honors were sponsored by Cumberland Valley Jersey Breeders.

Another Martin win came when Jester Pride Pearl Daisy, a 3-year-old shown by Douglas Martin, was named reserve grand champion open winner. That same animal was named reserve senior open champion.

On top of that, Pleasant Valley's Milestone Faithful Flower, an aged cow, won best animal bred and owned by an exhibitor.

The Martins were partially responsible for several other wins as well.

This is the 'cow' side of the ridge upon which Evergreen Farms new 1,600 free stall dairy facility is sited. The water tanks jut up along the top of the ridge. Through a flush system, the manure is washed out of the parlor, on the left, and the two free stall barns. The wash water then goes through a separator, at the right of the bottom barn. Once the solids are removed and dry stacked, the fluid travles downhill further to a lagoon. The pump house, far right, on the breast of the lagoon, pumps the fluid back through the flush system, or out through irrigation pipes to fields. On the other side of the ridge are feed stuff storage sheds, trench silos and equipment sheds. The design of the facility was based on existing operations throughout the United States.

the roof's shadows.

But the bright natural light was not why Harpster was squinting. He was concentrating on cows, and he squints a little when he thinks.

He was standing at the crossroads of the barn, the center aisle which bisects the four long parallel gutter-aisles, each with two rows of stalls. The center aisle serves as the main traffic control area for the barns.

There are 1,560 free stalls in all.

All under roof, the center aisle leads to a holding area large enough for 200 cows.

From the holding area, six gate baffles allow the cows to merge into two aisles of a double-40 parallel milking parlor.

It's open and airy.

It's huge.

It is Harpster's dream.

The freestall dairy operation sits on a long ridge on the 2,500-acre Evergreen Farms. The facility is impossible to miss on a drive-by, with the structures located about 100 yards south of Rt. 45, about five miles west of Rockspring, Centre County.

(Rockspring is the site of the Penn State University Ag Progress Days.)

On first inspection, without cows in it, the center aisle area appeared as a maze of square metal gating. The open-air design of the barns doesn't allow a quick understanding of the logic behind the entire design.

It's like judging distance in a forest. It takes a little time to get used to the visual tricks the eyes can play.

However, with cows moving through, and after the brain has time to comprehend the perspective of the place and the function of its pieces, it all falls into place.

Cows and heifers were moving and stopping, going in one direction then another; workers were trying to split their vision by keeping one eye on Harpster and another eye on the cattle and still open and close gates to catch and separate the cattle.

It was like watching a football coach teach his team a new play.

With his ever-present large leaf tobacco giving a slight swell to his right cheek, Harpster, 55, moved about deliberately, wasting few words in telling the men which cattle were to be moved where.

Harpster was sorting cattle. "That one goes. Stop that one. No, no, I want that white heifer . . . "

He had brought his 500 registered and grade Holstein milking herd into the facility in groups, getting them accustomed to the new facility.

It was training for the cows. Training for the people.

Eventually, the cows will know when the noon milking and the midnight milking are to come; they will become at total ease in the facility.

The older cattle are more difficult, the younger adapt easier.

All the cows wear collars which contain an electronic identifier, similar to what many libraries have in their books, only for the cows. The chip is embedded in a thick, flat plastic "bell."

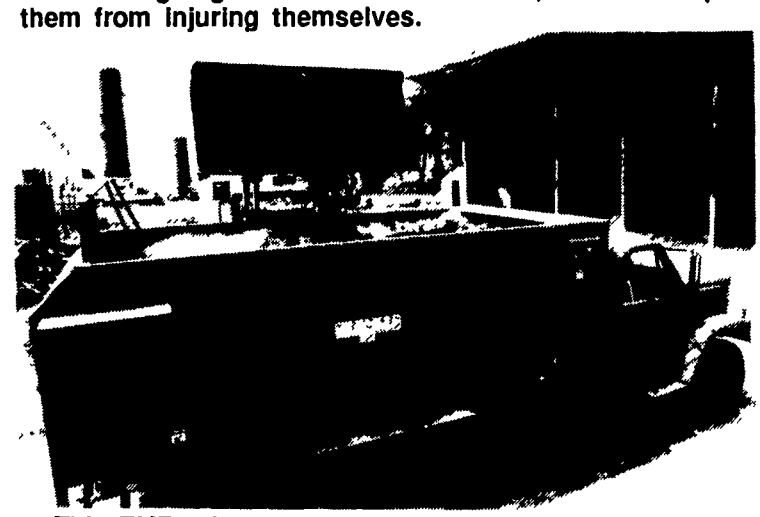
When the cows are moved from the milking parlor to the freestalls, they pass through an electronic "door" which reads the chip.

The electronic door is actually part of an automatic cow separation system, which, using the computer and pneumatically powered gates, allows through-passage to

(Turn to Page A21)

The stall dividers are mounted to the wall with spring steel coils to provide some give. The floating bar prevents cows from going too forward into the stall, and also keeps them from injuring themselves.

The whole free stall operation is set up with a flush cleaning system.



This TMR mixer was custom made to handle feeding more than 1,500 cows.

The working pit of the double-40 parallel milking parlor requires only a few people to milk 80 cows at a time.

These dry stacks of manure are the solids removed from flush water from the milking parlor and both free stall barns by the screened belts on these conveyors.

Harpster Builds

the free stall aisle, or diverts the cow to a smaller holding area.

Each chip has a separate number. Each cow number is matched up with a chip number and the main computer system contains a file on each cow.

It also does this: If a cow has shown a heat during the day, a stop code can be put into the computer so that, when her chip is read, the computer automatically "tells" the gates to divert the cow to a holding area for breeding.

The I.D. chip also is used when the cow is being milked.

As the cow enters one of the 40 parallel stalls, the chip is read and her file opened to record her milk flow.

A stop code can be put into the computer so that any cow on medications will not be milked with the others. It helps prevent contamination of the bulk tank milk.

Also, if there is a drastic change in a cow's performance, the computer is designed to issue a warning. That way, a stop code can be punched in so that cow is automatically separated from the rest on her way back to the stalls.

It can help to quickly identify a sick cow.

Other information on the cow is also kept in the computer. The amount of milk given is read and recorded by the computerized milking machines in the parlor. That information is kept on each cow.

While the computerization cuts down on the need for Harpster to subscribe to testing through the Pa.DHIA, he continues to have the herd on test.

Because of the size of his herd and his independently achieved component testing and record keeping, Harpster said that basically he does not need Pa.DHIA.

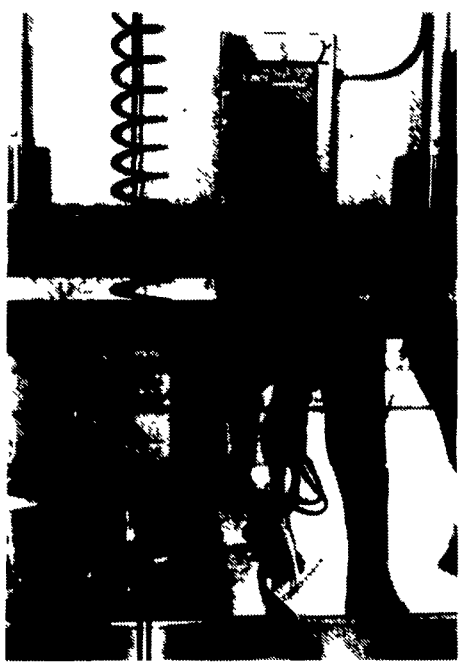
However, he said he will not do away with the service. The former president of the state Holstein Association said the test results through Pa.DHIA are necessary in order to improve the breed because the standard for progeny testing is maintained.

Also, he said he values and uses the somatic cell count tests for management.

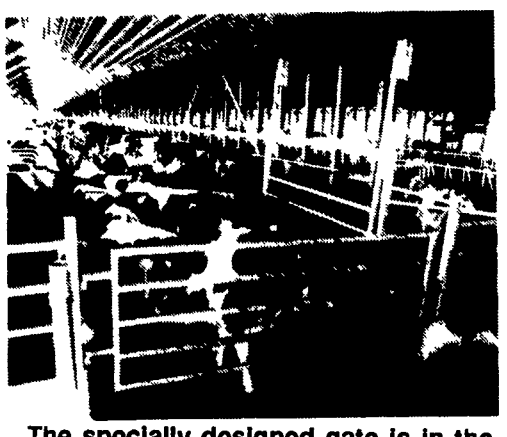
But he said his real viewpoint is that his operation should present a challenge to Pa.DHIA. They should see what they can do for him and others who may adopt the same technology.

"There needs to be a system where we can use data from large herds," he said. "I'd like to be one of the persons to help progress us onto a state-of-the-art type system."

(Turn to Page A27)



Computerized milkers record the cow number and the amount of milk produced at each milking. The claw is an automatic takeoff.



The specially designed gate is in the closed position. Because of the counterbalances, it can easily be opened, but not by cows.

This holding area to the parlor can hold 200 cows.

Seedborne Septoria glume blotch
Smut including stinking smut, loose smut and flag smut
Early season powdery mildew
Early season rust including leaf and stripe rust

The ONLY seed treatment for protection against certain seedborne, soilborne AND foliar diseases.

Baytan 30 flowable fungicide lowers disease pressure both above and below the soil line. That means a better bottom line for your wheat, barley, oats and rye.

Baytan 30 protects against a broad spectrum of early season seed and seedling diseases – with up to eight weeks of activity against foliar diseases such as rust and powdery mildew. But the benefits of early plant health last much longer. This means your foliar spraying decision can be delayed, and perhaps eliminated.

With Baytan 30, you'll not only see a healthier crop – you'll see more of it at harvest. In 10 years of field trials throughout the country, seed treated with Baytan 30 has shown a yield advantage of 5 bushels an acre.

Baytan 30 is available only at Gustafson-certified seed conditioners. For the location nearest you, contact Gustafson at 1-800-638-1404.

Feed Mixer At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The farm and mixer feeder wagon was the only tumbler mixer in the U.S. when designed in 1966. Today, several companies are following this principle, but the Farm Aid remains in the lead in simplicity of design and overall performance.

The simple but rugged spiral is driven from both ends, preventing excessive strain on shafts and bearings. The basic design has not changed since 1966, more than 26 years of experience in the mixer feeder business. The mixer will be at the display at Ag Progress. For more information call Joseph Swantak (607)432-0891.

Million Acres In CRP

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has accepted an additional 998,211 acres of highly erodible and other environmentally sensitive cropland into the Conservation Reserve Program, Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan announced recently.

"After 11 signup periods, we now have enrolled 35,395,951 acres into the program. This acreage provides substantial environmental benefits by reducing soil erosion, improving wildlife habitat and enhancing water quality," he said.

"The Conservation Reserve Program is one of the largest federal commitments to environmental quality and clearly shows how effective voluntary farm stewardship programs can be."

The additional acreage, which was bid during the eleventh signup period from July 8-19, 1991, was concentrated in Iowa with 100,490 acres; Texas with 86,574 acres; and Missouri with 87,992 acres.

Pennsylvania ranked among the bottom third, with 93 contracts at an annual rent of $225,305.

Per acre rental payment rates for the 10-15 year contracts averaged $52.35.

Pseudorabies

• Vaccination of all infected herds.

• Proper utilization of Best Management Practices.

7. A cost sharing program should be developed for those with the disease so the cost of supporting the program does not have to be borne by those currently infected alone.

8. Herd owners in the neighborhood of infected herds should be notified that an infected herd is in their area, so that they can take proper precautions.

Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff said the Department of Agriculture would pay close attention to the thoughts and concerns of swine producers and would refer the recommendations to the Pennsylvania Pseudorabies Eradication Advisory Committee.

"Pseudorabies has become a growing regional and national problem, and our department will do all we can to eliminate it," Wolff said.

DHIA Bylaws Committee Meets

The PA DHIA Bylaws Committee met recently and has been charged with making changes to better reflect member desires.

As part of the project to reorganize PA DHIA, a new set of bylaws were drafted and were approved to go into effect on Oct. 1, 1992.

Those bylaws were designed to provide a single membership category whereby all members would be direct members.

The new bylaws are important also in reducing sizes of membership districts, setting one director per district, creating a procedure for nominating director candidates at large, and eliminating liability at the local association board level, etc.

As a result of the recent differences over local association autonomy, the PA DHIA board rescinded the proposed bylaws and directed that a committee of members be organized to review, draft, and revise the present bylaws for proposal to the board. The revised bylaws would replace the present bylaws.

The committee is to review the current and formerly proposed bylaws, establish goals for both membership control and operational responsibility of the association, review bylaws of similar organizations to examine how other associations or cooperatives have approached this issue, and draft a revision to the current bylaws for recommendation for adoption to the board.

Hostetters Named Premier Breeder, Exhibitor Again

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — The Dale and Thelma Hostetter family of Annville was named premier breeder and exhibitor of the Lebanon Area Fair open division Holstein show last week, taking the double title for the third straight year, and five of the last six.

The Hostetter's failed to capture the grand champion title, as they have in the past.

This year, Sonnen Spring Farm, of Richland walked away with the title for grand champion of the 177-entry show with Sonnen Acres Starbuck Dulci, a 4-year-old Hanoverhill daughter.

Judge Glenn Tripp, of Little Genesee, N.Y., said, "The dept of the show, especially for the junior best of three, was tremendous.

"If you sat down and figured how many days of one's life are put into those cattle, you would realize how much is invested in these cattle.

"I always try to be complimentary when judging that class, but with today's entries, I didn't have to try. It's one of the strongest breed classes," he said.

While actually judging the junior best of three, Tripp said that out of the many county shows he judges, even the last place at Lebanon would win in many county shows.

Taking reserve grand champion of the show was Himmel-Valley Vin Tage, a senior 2-year-old owned by Dale and Kynel Himmelberger, of Jonestown.

Junior champion was Jesse Bomgardner's Loving Meadows Krystal, an intermediate heifer calf.

Reserve junior champion was Jay Bomgardner, Loving Meadows Lover Girl, a junior yearling.

From the left, receiving premier breeder and premier exhibitor of the Lebanon Area Fair, are the Hostetter family of Dale-Pride Holsteins, Alan, Ernie, Gregory, Gail, Thelma, Dale, Becky, Kurt, and Bryan Hostetter. Also shown is the Lebanon county fair royalty and judge Glenn Tripp.

Lebanon Youth Livestock Auction Raises $69,210.90

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Lebanon County livestock youth earned $69,210.90 in all last week at the end of the Lebanon Area Fair livestock auction.

Every year, after the end of the week of youth market animal shows and competitions, most of the livestock entered in the show are sold at auction. The monies raised are typically saved for further education with some reinvested into their livestock raising program.

The champion market hog, shown by Jason Shirk sold to People's National Bank for $1,350.

The champion market lamb, shown by P.J. Barr, of Myerstown, was purchased by I.D.S. Financial Services for $725.

The top steer, shown by Seth Myers, was bought by Agway Inc., of Lebanon, for $2,400.

Though none of the prices paid were records, they showed a strong commitment by the agriculture community to support its youth programs, even when the economy isn't doing well, said Ken Winebark, county livestock agent.

The average price paid for 119 hogs was $256, including the price for the champion.

The average price paid for 64 market lambs was $214, also with the champion. And the average price paid for the 21 steer sold was $1,153.

Keystone Farm Credit purchased the top lamb carcass shown by Dan Atkins, while Lebanon Valley National Bank purchased the top hog carcass, shown by Josh Heagy.

Buyers for People's National Bank stand with Jason Shirk and his grand champion market hog, after buying the hog for $1,350.

Harpster also has a nutrient management plan for the facility. With 1,400 tillable acres, his planned milking herd is close to a self-contained one cow per acre stocking rate, similar to suggested limits being considered by the state Legislature.

His manure cleaning, handling and storage system is very unique in that it uses aspects of several types of systems.

However, the actual siting of the entire facility was probably the most difficult.

"We've been building barns down in valleys, instead of on the tops of hills," Harpster said.

In the past, before the water pump systems, when many of the older farm sites were established, the farmhouse and barn had to be near an easily accessible, preferably surface water supply. Which means down in a valley, thus the creation of the poor ventilating bank barns.

However, it's in the tops of ridges where those important air currents provide ventilation on even the calmest of days. There are no fans in the cow buildings. There are no closed walls either. He has insulated curtains to cover the sides.

Also, the flow of waste is predictable and driven by gravity.

"It took awhile to make a decision on the site, but it is unquestionable the best site," he said.

Trips to Florida and California to large operations gave him ideas for the place. In fact, he said many ideas came from one large farm in California.

"I had the idea that I would do this someday, but I didn't actually get going until February," he said. The footers were dug last October.

He purchased a backhoe and a bulldozer and did a lot of the site preparation with his own hired help.

Harpster said the size of the herd was determined by taking into account Evergreen Farms' support capabilities.

"I designed this to what we could handle with crops, manure management, water and to what the facilities could handle."

The layout of the operation uses the two slopes of the ridge.

First, there is the "wet" area, or the cow area: the parlor and freestall barns actually are on the southwestern slope of a ridge. The floors of the barns are on a 2.5 percent slope.

There are six 14,000-gallon water storage tanks just on the same side of the slope.

The entire cow area is a rough-textured, grooved cement and the base of the walls are cement. The effect is like a large dry trough with cow beds (stalls) on the banks.

If water is poured from the top of the barns, it all would run down through the barns to a large fluid collection sewer-trench.

In fact, that's what the water tanks are for. At strategic locations throughout the barn and parlor are manhole-like water valves. When water is released from the storage tanks, the pressure pushes up on the large valves and water gushes out.

Some of the valves are designed to be directional, casting a spray arc less than 180 degrees. The can also be manually directed for fine-tuning.

When Harpster switches one of the water release levers, a small wall of water, about 6- to 8-inches high rushes down through the gutter-aisles, dislodging and washing away manure.

It's like a small Texas flood rushing down a dry creek bed.

The manure-laden fluid flows completely down to the end of the barn, into the trough and then all the way down hill, to the far downhill corner of the second freestall, to a manure separation device.

The device is contained within an inground cement, topless box. To separate the manure solids from the liquid, the manure-liquid goes through two pipes into the box and empty onto a screened conveyor.

As the conveyor rotates on its tracks it carries the solids up high, out of the box and deposits them on a cemented pad for dry stacking.

The liquid, now free of large solids, flows through pipes beneath the separator screen and continues for more than 100 yards downhill to a manure liquid storage lagoon.

On the breast of the lagoon is a shed-sized, cement block pump house.

From the pump house, the liquid can be pumped back into the flush-water storage tanks, or pumped into lines which stretch out into the fields for crop irrigation.

One well was dug for the new barn.

"I was happy when I first saw it work. I engineered it basically to put my own flush system in," he said.

The "dry" side of the operation is on the opposite slope of the ridge. There is where the animal feed stuffs for making bulk total mixed rations are stored and prepared.

There are three large cement walled trench silos for storing silage and haylage (additional trenches are planned), and a Harpster-made (wood cut at Harpster's sawmill, trees from property), eight-section feed storage shed.

He can store a half million pounds of of feed components in the current shed. That's enough to last two weeks. It will probably be enlarged.

The feed is prepared in a customized mixer, the size of a dump truck, with dual, rear feed ejection ports. A front end loader is used to scrape up the ingredients to mix feed.

Harpster worked with Rissler TMR Mixers, whose people then made his ideas into a reality.

There's more.

In the milk parlor, on the top of the splash guards (sheet metal devices to protect equipment and people in the parlor milking area from cow manure.), Harpster had the contractor install 2-inch PVC (polyvinylchloride) pipe the entire length.

The pipe is perforated at 4-inch intervals and is also hooked up to the water tanks. It is set on a timer, and on a regular basis, jets of water clean off the splash guard.

On the floor of the parlor stall, against the edge of the milking area, just behind the cow's rear foot area, are miniature flood caps, just like the larger ones in the floors of the stalls. These smaller water ports have their own switch and flush out any manure deposited while the cow is being milked.

There are other Harpster modifications, which may well catch on in other cattle confinement construction — such as his rotating gates, which are more like flipping gates.

The gates are located at the distant ends of a freestall section. In the open position, they allow free passage of cattle to both freestall aisles. In the closed position they restrict cattle to one side or the other.

Made of the same hollow square metal rails used in the rest of the confinement system, the gates swing up to open and down to close.

The opening and closing requires little effort as Harpster designed them with a counterbalance made of railroad rail.

He said he measured and weighed a length of rail to determine its density, figured out the amount of weight needed for a counterbalance, and used bolts to attatch the cut and painted rail sections to extended gating rails.

The pivatol system was made especially for the gate with teflon. Eventually, to further eliminate labor, Harpster said he would like to install pneumatic switches to open the gates. Closing them is to remain a manual task, he said.

In fact the gating is completely customized, with Harpster's crew doing the work, he said.

The way the stalls are constructed uses some of the latest proven designs.

Schopf Brothers

held the chickens atop an old chicken crate while their father caponized them. They averaged about 50 chickens an hour back then — about equal with old-timers experienced with castrated roosters. But the job was rather unique and a challenge to the boys who sought to increase their speed.

Now, on the average, they can caponize 250 chickens per hour.

"We guarantee you won't find anyone else as fast," Gene said. "We might be young, but we got lots of years of experience. I estimate we caponized about 50,000."

Not only do the brothers have speed but also, they say, the lowest mortality and slip rate — less than one percent.

Lower mortality among the chickens is due in part to the brothers's speed.

"The faster the operation, the less stress on the chickens," said Gene, who designed a customized table that enables his brother to place the chickens in position so that as the table rotates, no duplication of effort exist.

The Schopfs also strive for sanitary conditions and use disinfectant to prevent infections.

The demand for the brothers to caponize chickens often takes them all over the East Coast. Sometimes they are gone from home for a week at a time. Although they work long hours on these tours of duty, they find their time away from home like a vacation "because it gives us a chance to see the country," Jim said.

Advertising is mostly word-of-mouth and through recommendations from Penn State.

"When you have a good thing, people know it. Our best publicity is to go to a farm and do a good job," he said.

The Schopfs raise 14,000 Penobscot capons that they sell mostly as starter capons to 4-H'ers during the months from May to August.

"There's a good profit margin for 4-H'ers in raising capons. They can make $5 to $8 a bird, not including labor," Gene said.

They also sell commercially and to growers. They find mail delivery an excellent way to ship capons. There are no extra handling charges for this service — only the postage.

It takes about 20 weeks to raise capons that are famous for their tender, juicy meat and generally sold during the holiday season when they weigh 8 to 12 pounds.

Since the produce business is seasonal, does that mean the brothers take it easier during the winter months?

Never!

Gene was graduated from Millersville University with a B.S. in education for industrial arts and technology, which he teaches. Jim is currently a junior at Millersville University where he is pursuing a teaching degree in math and athletic coaching.

They got the idea to combine teaching school and farming from their father who did and found it an ideal combination.

"Dad worked all the time and he taught us how to work," said Jim, who said they got their start in the produce business when they were youngsters growing up on their parents' Mountville farm where they grew rhubarb, onions, and corn to sell. "We'd fill our little express wagon and go around the neighborhood knocking on doors," Gene said.

Both brothers were graduated from Hempfield High School. Because the school did not have FFA, the brothers were never part of the organized FFA program.

"But we had our own FFA right on the farm," Jim said. "We were too busy working to go to 4-H."

When Gene was in high school, he switched from pulling the express wagon loaded with produce to setting up a roadside market. He continued his schooling during the winter months and running the roadside stand at the family farm during the summer. But, this year, Gene purchased a 20-acre farm complete with 2-story chicken house and an orchard.

It's an ideal location for their produce business since it is along Marietta Avenue, a highly traveled road between Lancaster and Marietta. And, it has a large pull-off area and is not at a dangerous traffic location.

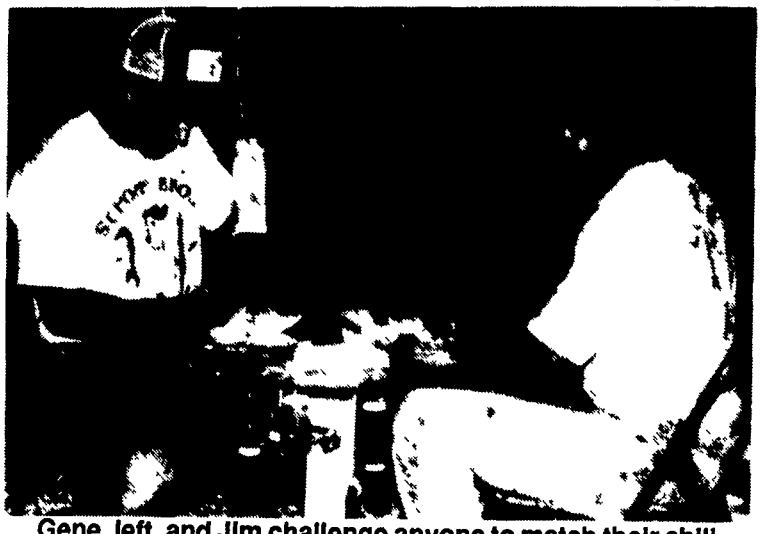
The Schopfs also set up produce wagons in three other areas, which are run by high schools students eager to earn some money.

In addition to the 20 acres on the farm, they also raise produce on another 20 acres.

To keep the produce fresh daily, the brothers get up early to pull 25 acres of sweet corn, and pick peaches, blueberries, blackberries, plums, apricots, cherries, and grapes. They also raise tomatoes, canteloupes, watermelon, and pumpkins.

Ninety-five percent of the produce sold at their stands are raised by the Schopfs, but they occasionally buy some from neighboring farmers. The Schopfs strive to handle most of the work themselves but they do have several

(Turn to Page A29)



Gene, left, and Jim challenge anyone to match their ability to caponize 250 roosters an hour. Gene designed and built a table that enables maximized speed for the two brothers to work efficently during the operation.

Gene, left, and Jim Schopf are proud of their 10-acre pumpkin patch. They predict this pumpkin will grow to be at least 600 pounds. They have a secret formula for raising massive pumpkins, but they don't want to reveal it to the competition.

First Southwest Regional Holstein Show Held

DAVID HIEBERT
Westmoreland Co.
Correspondent

DUNBAR (Fayette Co.)—The first southwest Regional Holstein show was held last Saturday at the fairgrounds. This was the fi show here since the creation of six Holstein regions in Pennsylvania.

Jay Espenshade, county agent, said that some who could have participated may have held back. But the show has room to grow.

Rick Allen, show chairman, said they were pleased with the turnout and that it is the only regional show that gives money premiums.

Grand champion of the show is Pete Cavalier Vick, a four-year-old, shown by Suzy Stutzman, Friedens. Reserve champion is owned by Andrea Bednarski, Avella, who showed three-year-old E-Ricks Sultan Prestige. The Bednarski farm also captured the premier breeder award. The premier exhibitor award went to Allen-Hill Dairy, Smock.

The brothers also dress capons to sell at the stands. They plan to offer dressed turkeys during the holiday season.

Through membership with Pa. Vegetable Growers Association and reading lots of articles in agricultural publications the brothers keep up-to-date on growing and marketing.

Despite hectic schedules, the brothers were both college wrestlers in the Collegiate Division 1. They enjoy snowmobiling and boating.

With his industrial arts training, Gene printed the businesses' shirts, letterhead, cards, and bags. He made much of the house furniture and several park benches.

Buries a little residue. Or a lot.

The new White 445 Chisel Plow makes complying with residue guidelines and requirements easy. Options like rippled coulters and chisel points set at 15" spacing leave lots of residue. Concave coulters and twisted shovels set at 12" spacing leave less residue. And these are just a few of the combinations available.

Our deep-till shank option rips hardpan by tilling 4" to 6" deeper than chisel shanks. This reduces compaction problems. And our leveling bar option provides a smoother surface for your next pass.

With nine models ranging from 7' to 23' working width, there's a model with the options to match your residue management plans.

Show Supporters Make PADDS Special

HARRISBURG, Dauphin Co. — "The cattle are the best in the nation, the facilities are excellent, it is a tremendous show - we're delighted to be a part of the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show," said long time friend and supporter of the All-American, Paul Nichols of the American Dairy Association.

Each year, several hundred farms, businesses and individuals donate their time and money to assist with this elite cattle exhibition. The support and enthusiasm for the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show stems back to the origination of the show 29 years ago. That is when eight men began working on the goal of creating a forum of open competition between cattle from neighboring states, Canada and Pennsylvania.

Long term dedication to the show begins with contributions from individuals such as John Merryman of Merryman Sales Co., Sparks, Maryland. Merryman has been a show sponsor since the inception of the All-American. He and many others create the unique spirit of competition and pride that runs so deep at this internationally recognized show.

Agribusiness support is essential to the success of the show. Organizations such as Atlantic Breeders, Sire Power, Agway, Pfizer Inc., Nasco Inc., and Ralston Purina lend financial support and staff time for the various youth contests and judging competitions.

Devoted to promoting agricultural education and youth development, these businesses recognize the value of this show for the advancement of the dairy industry.

Penn State University personnel are an integral part of the show management team. From cattle check-in, to educational programs and youth activities, numerous members of the Penn State Dairy and Animal Science Department and county extension staff keep operations running smoothly and fairly.

Each year, more than 60 agribusinesses participate in the show as commercial exhibitors and general show supporters. These aggressive businesses utilize this show to showcase their wares and promote relations with the dairy farmers who attend the show.

The trade show keeps dairymen updated on new trends and technology and helps the businesses keep an open line of communication with the end users of their products.

Special thanks goes to the hundreds of dairymen who make financial contributions to the show in the form of class sponsorships.

Premiums for this elite show exceed $78,000 not including ribbons and trophies, or other expenses associated with such a tremendous show.

Breeders' contributions are the essence of the show. Their devotion to their breed and the betterment of the industry is demonstrated by their generous support each year.

The Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show is a cooperative effort. From exhibitors and sponsors to show management and the thousands of dairymen that attend the show, everyone has an important role. Given the commitment that the show has experienced in the past, and the growth the All-American is enjoying now, it is easy to see that future shows will only be getting better.

Come see what all the enthusiasm is about, and share in the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show excitement. The public is encouraged to visit the show Sept. 21-24, at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. Open daily, admission and parking at the show are free.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Officials with the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show, one of the largest dairy exhibitions under roof, have announced the names of the judges for the different breed competitions.

Ayrshire exhibitors participating in the Eastern National Ayrshire Show on Sept. 23, should recognize judge Lowell Lindsey.

As director of sire development with United Breeders Inc., a Canadian artificial insemination business, he travels extensively and participates in numerous judging panels.

In addition to major shows in the U.S. and Canada, Lindsey has traveled to many countries, including England, Japan, Spain, Scotland, Australia and Italy.

He has served numerous times on the All-Canadian and All-American selection panels.

For the Brown Swiss breeders, Richard E. Keene, of Gilbertsville, N.Y., is the judge for the Sept. 22 show.

Keene and his daughter Beth own and operate Keeneland Farm, a 400-acer dairy with a milking herd of 90 registered Holsteins. The RHA exceeds 21,000 pounds of milk, 780 pounds of fat and 700 pounds of protein.

Keene is also a national director of the Holstein Association and officiates at national and international shows.

A graduate of Cornell University, he has worked as a fieldman and classifier for the Holstein Association.

As a judge, he has reviewed all breeds at almost all levels, including 10 national Holstein shows, eight national Brown Swiss shows and at shows in more than eight countries.

Robert Fitzsimmons, of East Montpelier, Vt., is to be judge during the national Guernsey show set for Sept. 23 at the state Farm Show complex, as part of the All-American Dairy Show.

Fitzsimmons has judged national and international shows including the Western National, Michigan State, Southern National and several Canadian shows. He also judged tours in Germany, Japan, England, Mexico and he held a judging symposium in Italy.

In 1984, he joined Lylehaven Holstein Farm where he works as general manager. Before that he was a classifier with the Hostein Association of America.

Holstein exhibitors will have their entries reviewed by Gary Estes, of Ozark, Mo., on Sept. 24 during the Eastern National Holstein Show.

Born and raised on a dairy farm in southwest Missouri, he is a graduate of the University of Missouri and taught vocational agriculture for six years. He is also an auctioneer and is associated with several auctioneering services.

He has judged all six breeds in dairy shows around the United States and overseas several times.

As assistant judge for the Holstein show, Glen Cook of Elkhart, Ind., was selected by the Holstein Association.

Cook and his son Tom own and operate Bauga Valley Holsteins. They have a registered Holstein herd with a rolling production average of 22,486 pounds of milk, 865 pounds of fat and 754 pounds of protein. The BAA is 110.3.

He has bred two reserve All-American Holsteins and has had several other nominations.

Jersey breeders who show at the All-American are to have their cattle judged by Dennis Patrick of Woodbine, Md.

The Jersey show, called the Mid-Atlantic Regional Jersey Show, is to be held Sept. 24.

Patrick currently farms 800 acres in Howard County, Maryland, with his father, brother and uncle, where they milk 200 head of both registered Holsteins and Ayrshires.

Prior to joining the family business, he worked as a herdsman for four years for Rothrock Golden Holsteins, in Kempton.

He was a member of the 1978 Maryland Dairy Cattle Judging Team, which went on to win the national contest.

Since then, he has judged numerous county, state and national shows, inlcuding the Pennsylvania State Holstein Show, the National Ayrshire Show and the Maryland State Holstein Show.

James Patterson of Greenville, Ohio, is to be the judge for the Eastern National Milking Shorthorn Show, as part of the All-American Dairy Show, Sept. 22.

A graduate of Ohio State University, Patterson's experience includes a 12-year stint with the Holstein Association, both as a classifier and later at the supervisor of classifiers.

As a judge, he has officiated numerous national shows and has traveled to Colombia and Italy to judge.

He is involved in a business in which he sells embryos and offspring of cattle he owns in partnership. He also is a director on the National Holstein board.

Control Weeds After Harvest

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Following the harvest of small grains is an excellent time to attempt some control of problem perennial weeds such as hempdogbane, milkweed, bindweed, Canada thistle, and quackgrass, said Bill Curran, Penn State agronomist.

After small grain harvest, let the weeds recover so there is sufficient foliage to intercept a herbicide application. This usually means a mid-late August or early September application.

With most broadleaf perennial weeds, the systemic herbicides including 2, 4-D, Banvel, or Roundup are more effective when applied in the late summer or fall. Fall applications of Roundup also work well on many perennial grasses, especially the cool season grasses such as quackgrass or orchardgrass.

If seeding a forage legume such as alfalfa in late summer, Roundup may be used prior to planting the forage without concern for soil residues.

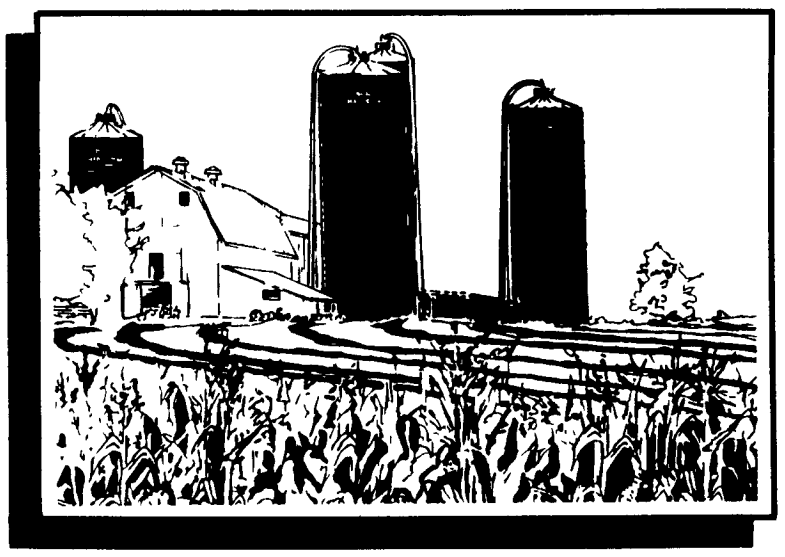
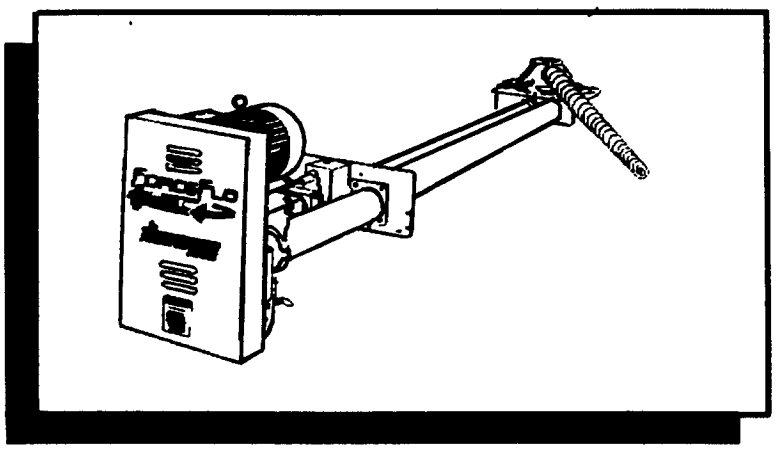
RIGHT MOISTURE CORN



Forget sluggish dryers or waiting in line at the elevator. When you harvest your corn at the right moisture and store it in a Harvestore structure, you can take your corn straight from your combine to storage. Once inside a Harvestore structure, your corn is protected from insects, rats, and mice.



By combining the forces of auger action and sweep action, the ForceFlo™ power sweep auger unloader can help you handle a full head of right moisture corn. It's possible because the sweep auger automatically goes to work whenever the discharge auger is operated. This dual action reduces the chance for grain to set up and compact.

You can reduce field losses by ensiling your corn at 22 to 28 percent moisture content.

There are many benefits of a right moisture corn feeding program when compared with dry grain.

Feeding right moisture corn (grain ensiled with a kernel moisture of 22 to 28 percent) can help you get your livestock producing closer to their genetic potential. You can also reduce your field loses and eliminate the time, labor and cost associated with artificial drying. And when used in a properly balanced ration, improved feed conversion is often possible. Properly ensiled right moisture corn is readily consumed by livestock, and the nutrients are efficiently digested.

The longer your crop remains in the field, the higher the potential for increased field losses.

Right moisture corn requires the right equipment: an A.O. Smith Harvestore® Products, Inc. structure and a ForceFlo™ power sweep auger unloader. Contact your authorized Harvestore Products dealer and let him explain the benefits of feeding Right Moisture Corn.

Good Plants For Bad Office Conditions

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Some of the conditions that zap your energy at work also may be killing your office plants, says a Penn State horticulture specialist.

"Lack of natural light and the inability to control heat and air conditioning may make it difficult to grow healthy tropical plants in an office environment," said Dr. J. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture.

If you want your office to look like a greenhouse, the trick is to select plants that need little care. "It's a lot easier to purchase plants that can tolerate your office's environmental conditions than to try to alter your office to suit the plants," said Nuss.

Plants that can withstand some neglect include Chinese evergreen, climbing anthurium, jade plant, Indian rubber tree, Java fig, screw pine and goldenstrip.

And don't overlook hardy cultivars with names that reflect their ability to take abuse—cast iron, arrowhead, devil's ivy and crown of thorns. These plants don't require humidity or frequent watering.

Nuss says light is the most essential factor for growing indoor plants. Yet some offices lack direct sunlight or may not have windows. Although fluorescent office lighting often makes people look "yellow," it's adequate for keeping some plants green.

Plants that need minimum light include areca palm, Chinese evergreen, heartleaf philodendron, parlor palm, snake plant and Wandering Jew.

If light intensity is low, you can increase the length of time the plant is exposed to light. But you're not doing your plants a favor if you habitually leave your office lights on all night.

"Besides wasting energy, excessive light can be just as harmful to plants as too little," Nuss said. "All plants require some period of darkness to develop properly. The maximum amount of time plants should receive light is 16 hours."

The most common problem with indoor plants is overwatering. "If you water your plant as soon as the soil crust dies, you're overwatering," said Nuss. "The plant's roots usually are in the bottom two-thirds of the pot, so don't water until that area starts to slightly dry out."

You can't tell if a plant needs water simply by looking. "You have to feel the soil," says Nuss. "Stick your index finger about two inches deep into the soil. If it feels damp, don't water."

All indoor plants, especially flowering varieties, are very sensitive to drafts or heat. Forced air dries plants rapidly and overtaxes their root systems. For this and other reasons, holiday plants such as poinsettias often don't survive in offices.

"Gift plants are grown in greenhouses under ideal conditions," said Nuss. "When you bring them into your home or office where the light is poor and temperatures are maintained for human comfort, they just don't last. Enjoy them while they're attractive and in season, then discard them."

pretty much standard (88 inches to 96 inches long), but to knowledge, never before has a facility had the combination of these particular cow comfort and safety devices, low labor cleaning, and no energy ventilation systems.

The stalls have brisket boards, heavy coil spring supported stall dividers, floating non-electrical "training bars" (which prevents cows from walking foward in the stall beyond the brisket board), groundup rubber tire mulch and dirt pack underneath the heavy canvas-like aprons which form the bed covers, etc.,

Harpster said all the ideas have been gathered over the years, through doing farm visits to other large dairies in Florida and California and elsewhere, and through reading and applying other business uses of materials to his business.

The water tanks, for example, are actually railroad car tankers. The rest of the car was cut away leaving the cylindrical tanks, which were hoisted into the air by crane and set on end in a cement base.

The cattle watering troughs are not common in this area. They have a floating ball type of valve, and continue to provide a flow of fresh water.

Furthermore, the rectangular water tank is supported as though on a spit, so it can rotate.

When the tank water needs to be changed, it's a matter of unlatching and lifting. The water dumps out onto the floor, taking with it any debris that settled on the tank bottom.

There is a personal touch in almost everything, such as, making all the utilities run underground.

"I had it all in my mind how I wanted to it to be," Harpster said. "I was here every day."

There's a complete section of one free stall barn with 20 maternity bays. Overseen by assistant herdsman Dave Sible, he said they can reasonably expect up to 15 to 20 calves a day when the barns are full.

There's also a sick cow and hospital area, where a minor operation table is located and bays are set aside for ill cows. Sible has a small office there with a phone. He also has some medical supplies and health monitoring instruments, etc.,

Heat detection in such a large area is one of the things yet to be worked out. The rule is that everyone keeps an eye out to get down the cow numbers of those displaying heats.

In the barn less than a week, several of the cows were already showing heats.

At the suggestion of using binoculars to save spotters from chasing down cows to get numbers, Sible said, "That might be an idea."

Milking since 1953, Harpster said, "A lot of things I don't know about yet. I took a lot of precautions. I realize winter will bring problems I don't have. But all these things I did from talking to people and thinking about them. One idea would make me see another.

"I have a few grey hairs over this," he said, but added he believes he has tried to build a facility that, "Presents a well organized dairy that is a tribute and a benefit to the industry as a whole. When somebody visits I want them to leave knowing that milk is a pure, clean quality product."

Ideas and making them reality aren't the only things that apparently drives Harpster. He likes to find value in things that other people might miss.

Spruce Creek, for example, is one of the best fly fishing trout streams in the East. Harpster owns several miles of it and has used it to augment income.

He's not the first dairyman to own a large section of good trout water, but he may be one of the few to actually find the value in it.

"I realize the value in it and consequently, I'm able to keep the streams in the area in better condition," he said.

Extension Agent Survey Examines Conservation Progress

MOLINE, Ill. — Most of the nation's agricultural extension agents believe that farmers have taken important steps to achieve conservation compliance mandated by government regulations. But the agents also think that many farmers need more information about when compliance is tested and how to measure surface residue.

According to a survey conducted by Deere & Company, almost two-thirds of the agents indicated more than 60 percent of farmers in their areas are actively working to meet soil conservation requirements of their goverment-approved conservation plans. Agents ranked financial considerations as the top reason why some farmers are not making more progress toward compliance.

The survey also revealed that in most areas of the country, crop residue management is the number one topic among farmers working on conservation compliance. The one regional exception was the East (Florida and 12 Mid-Atlantic and New England states) where crop rotation was ranked number one. Crop residue management ranked second in these states.

The agents indicated they believe farmers aren't as aware as they need to be that one of the elements of compliance is the amount of surface residue that remains after planting. Most of the agents also believe that relatively few farmers are checking the success of their crop residue management techniques with actual measurements. Almost two-thirds of the agents surveyed indicated that no more than 20 percent of the farmers in their areas have actually measured surface residue.

More than half of the agents plan to organize or participate in educational efforts this year designed to help farmers gain a detailed understanding of residue management which will help them to meet government conservation rules.

The survey results are based on questionnaires returned by 1,240 agricultural extension agents in February and March this year.

Becky Crombert: Born To Be A Farmer

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

GLENMOORE (Chester Co.) — Becky Crombert used her master's degree in research psychology to work one year.

"The whole point was to make money to buy a farm," the soft spoken Becky reported, "but you can't do something that you don't like — it's not worth it."

So Becky left Boston and the thesis she had published toward a doctorate to pursue her first love — farming. Since March 1991, Becky is farm manager at Springton Manor, a 300-acre farm owned by Chester County Parks.

Springton Manor's purpose is to be a farm for people to visit and observe the many varieties of farm animals. It isn't a "real for profit farm" like Becky dreams of owning.

"It's a beautiful place, but it's run from a different perspective than a real farm. There is an emphasis on aesthetics rather than on making a dollar," she said.

Becky's consuming desire is to purchase her own farm, but she admits to a lot of discouragement. She said, "It used to be that with $500 in your pocket and determination, you could get a farm — now, you need a small miracle."

Other people's attitudes toward her dream are also detrimental.

"People ask me, 'Why would you throw away a college education and graduate school to be one of them?'"

Becky manages to keep her voice soft as she tells them, "Excuse me, but they're feeding you."

She finds it frustrating that there isn't more admiration for farmers and the skills they acquire in maintaining a farm. She is appalled that the majority of people are ignorant about the basics of agriculture.

Because so many groups tour Springton Manor, Becky needs to answer many of their questions. One parent was certain that the cow was just a gimmick used by farmers to attract attention to sell milk. "Where does milk really come from?" the woman continued to insist. Another visitor pointed to a goat and asked what kind of miniature cow it was.

It's obvious that Becky admires farming more than any other career in the world.

"Ever since I was six, I wanted to farm," Becky said. "I think I was born with farming in my blood. My great-grandfather, R.J. Shipman, had Jerseys in Kentucky and is listed in the Jersey Hall of Fame."

Becky's parents discouraged her from pursuing farming. "My mother, who was raised on a farm, can't understand why anyone would want to return to it," Becky said of her mother's complaints of hard work and long hours.

Becky retorts, "I can't see why anyone would want to throw away an opportunity to live on a farm. I love the cows and the lifestyle that farming offers."

Until he lay on his death bed, Becky's father, who was a psychologist, also discouraged Becky from pursuing farming. At that point, he told Becky, "I tried to discourage you all this time, but if you want cows — get cows."

Although her remaining family members still do not share her passion for cows, they are supportive in her desire — "but not with money," Becky is quick to report.

A few months ago Becky raised a calf that was slow in development. She bottle fed it every few hours, pampered it, and refused to leave her home for several weeks.

"My friends and family became so frustrated that I didn't have time to go away with them, but I was perfectly content staying home with the calf," Becky said.

Becky's firsthand experience with farming began as a teen ager, when she spent four summers working at Ardrossan Farms in Villanova, which reportedly has the top Ayrshire herd in the world. She has also spent a lot of time on her aunt's and uncle's farm in Kentucky. And, she participated in a dairy science program run by Technical Institute in Wisconsin that included hands-on experience by living and working on a Jersey farm. "It was a topnotch operation that was extremely well managed and organized with up-to-date records," Becky said.

Becky Crombert's dreams for owning her own farm are not idle wishing. Already she has begun building a herd of Jerseys and has purchased some equipment. Here she shows Cheddar, one of her four heifers. She also has three cows.

Until he lay on his death bed, Becky's father, who was a psychologist, also discouraged Becky from pursuing farming. At that point, he told Becky, "I tried to discourage you all this time, but if you want cows — get cows."

Her time spent there increased her preference for the Jersey breed.

In praise of Jerseys, she often says, "Farmers put one Jersey cow with their herd of Holsteins to correct the butterfat content in the milk, but you never see one Holstein put in a herd of Jerseys to correct their milk."

She likes the Jersey's sweet, docile personalities and the fact that they are more efficent in feed.

In her farm experience, Becky learned a lot about matching sires and dams in breeding. She finds it fascinating to watch genetics change from one generation to another. She is certified to breed through the American Breeding School.

While at Springton Manor, Becky finds actual real farming time at a minimum. "There's so much paper work at a place like this. I shovel manure in the morning and again in the afternoon when I do paperwork," she said.

"But it's definitely better than working in psychology," Becky said.

Becky's dreams for owning her own farm are not idle wishing. Already she has begun building a herd of Jerseys and has purchased some equipment. She is delighted that she can raise four of her own Jersey heifers at Springton Manor. Although she has three Jersey cows, she cannot keep them at Springton because the operation is not equipped to sell milk. So the cows are boarded by an Amish family who raises Jerseys in Lancaster County.

Previously, Becky boarded her cows with a farmer who had empty space in his barn. "I lost money big time," she said. He wasn't feeding them properly and the cows dropped from giving 15,000 pounds milk to 8,000 pounds."

When she placed the same cows with the Amish farmer, the cows doubled their output.

Although Becky makes many visits to see her cows, she said that overall she lets the Amish farmer take care of them as he pleases. "He treats them like his own," she said.

The farmer gets the milk in return for his labor and Becky gets to keep the calves.

On the side, Becky has started a craft business that she calls the Emerald Cow. Her biggest item is making stuffed cows that she sells at craft fairs and by word of mouth. A national catalogue is considering adding her stuffed cows to their line.

"The money that I make on them goes into a separate account for the farm," she said.

So far, with the profits, she has purchased a hay rake, corn planter, and one-half the price of a plow.

Becky also has a full line of hay equipment that she purchased at an auction. "I have a John Deere 3010 that is two years younger than I am and runs a lot better," she said.

Becky dreams of farming in Lancaster County. "I love the way they farm and the lay of the land. There's much better access to custom work and hay auctions, which does not exist in many areas of the country," she said.

Her desire is to farm on a small scale with about 30 cows, and grow the corn and hay but buy the grain. She prefers a stanchion barn and wants to do everything on her own without hired help.

Renting a farm holds no appeal for Becky. "If I rent, I fear that I'll be spending the rest of my life trying to save money to buy a farm and I'll never be able to get ahead," said Becky, who has studied figures many times to determine the possibility of renting.

Although Becky does not enjoy showing animals, she finds great satisfaction in attending shows and auctions. "I go there to day dream," she said. But this fall, she will be doing more than daydreaming — she'll be rooting for her Jerseys — because several Montgomery 4-H'ers will be showing three of her heifers.

Also, this fall, Becky will teach a course at West Chester College on small scale livestock raising. She was a former teaching assistant, but this will be her first time as a full-fledged teacher. She also works part time in a bookstore.

In addition to finding personal fulfillment in working with animals and the land, Becky enjoys many activities that women on the farm usually undertake. These include piecing quilts, sewing, and canning. She has experimented with making cheese and butter in looking for areas to increase the value of milk.

"I'm doing everything I can to own a farm someday, but it often doesn't seem like it will ever happen," she said. "I'd really like to know if anyone has a farm for sale at a family price?"

Nothing, she insists, could make her happier.

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Sunshine beamed down in early morning, scattering diamonds of dew across the damp grass of the pasture. Leaves of the oaks and poplars overhead stirred in the cool, northwestern breeze.

After several days of dark, damp, heavy-cloud cover, the brightness seemed especially beautiful and cheery. But task ahead was not.

"Erica threw her calf bed," The Farmer had warned me as he stopped by the calf barn.

The big, black cow had calved late the day before; now, many hours later, she had expelled her womb as well. We had gone several years since one of these bizarre and traumatic post-calving incidents, but were now looking at the second in a matter of a few weeks.

Three of us worked a good half-hour at the difficult, tiring, and messy task of correcting the problem. Finished off with a few surgical stitches, antibiotics, and pain-medication, everything possible had been done for Erica in her crisis.

Just an ordinary morning.

A phone call from repairman Dave brought unwelcome news. Wiring was burned on one of the silo unloader motors. A new one would run several hundred dollars but could be installed immediately. That silo is a major feed source and there was no alternative but to give a go-ahead on the job.

And realize that the failing motor had caused another several-hundred dollar repair bill on the unloader's wiring the previous week.

Just an ordinary morning.

"This is Bobbi at the Bathtub," said the voice of a good neighbor on the other end of the phone. Bobbi's house in the adjoining development is near one of the watering tubs between two pastures, offering instant identification and location.

Her concern for a cow with a calf in the pasture, a cow with obvious problems of some sort, was shortly repeated by another of our wonderful neighbors who alert us to any problems they see. I explained Erica's difficulty and thanked these caring folks for calling.

Headed home for lunch, employee John stopped by the house with the message that he had just pulled a heifer calf. The first-time mother apparently had no plans to get involved; she gave the calf a shove with her head and walked away.

I observed that all mothers probably felt that way at some fleeting point in their career and promised I would thaw some of the colostrum we always keep in the freezer to feed the newborn as soon as possible.

Just an ordinary morning.

"If Bobbi at the Bathtub sees a cow in trouble, it must be another cow," said The Farmer, abandoning lunch plans as he hastened back outside after I shared the information from our neighbors.

Sure enough, the cow in trouble was not Erica, but matronly Brenda, suffering a bout of post-calving milk fever, down at the other corner of the pasture. He three-wheeled back out with intravenous equipment and appropriate I.V. fluids.

"I almost rolled the grain truck this morning," the youngest calmly announced as we ate lunch, absent The Farmer. "If it had gone, it would have flattened the silage blower."

Mental vision of that possibility sent a chill of dread followed by a warm wash of gratitude that the kay word here was "almost."

The Farmer returned eventually to partake of his microwave-reheated hot lunch. Brenda had passed the milk-fever crisis. Erica was resting comfortably and periodically grazing, the abandoned calf nursed its first bottle - and four other newborns dotted the meadow. Installation of the new motor was under way.

Just an ordinary morning.

And they have the nerve to observe that I'm getting gray hairs.

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT SURIMI

Have you ever heard someone talking about imitation crab, lobster, or scallops? These people are speaking about surimi-a product which has become popular in the United States. This idea began 400 years ago in Japan as a method of processing fish. We only became acquainted with surimi in this country about 12 years ago.

If you have eaten imitation fish products such as fish sticks, sea flakes, or seafood salad, you may have eaten surimi.

Surimi is a Japenese term for the process of mincing fish fillets usually using white pollock found in Alaskan waters. The fish is cleaned, washed and strained. Sugar sorbitol and salt are aded to produce a concentrated fish paste. This fish paste is frozen and later thawed to be restructured into various products or ingredients.

The most common surimi-based seafood items available in the United States are simulated shellfish including crab, scallops, shrimp, and losbster-like products. Surimi-based products come in forms and textures such as tails, sticks or flakes, chunks and pre-breaded morsels, or portions, either thawed or frozen. It can be purchased in supermarkets as well as at specialty seafood stores.

Surimi offers a high percentage of protein, important minerals, and vitamins and has fewer calories and less fat than comparable servings of many other protein sources. Most products are precooked and require only heating or finishing to serve hot and no cooking to serve cold in appetizers or salads. They work well in seafoods salads, quiches, crepes, newburgs, omelets and cocktails.

Nutritiously, surimi products have about the same number of calories as natural shellfish. However, surimi is higher in carbohydrates, while natural shellfish is higher in protein. They are both low in fat. Unlike shellfish, surimi contains little cholesterol. Since surimi does not have much taste by itself, salt is added to improve the flavor making surimi high in sodium.

Surimi products are significantly cheaper than fresh crab or lobster—usually less than one-half the price of fresh fish. They are useful for stretching family food budget and lowering costs at restaurants. Because Alaska pollock is one of the largest fin-fish resources in the world, the long-term supply and price outlook for surimi is excellent. In addition, when you eat surimi, you do not have to worry about getting a piece of shell.

When surimi products are substituted for natural shellfish, the name should indicate which product is being used. For example, if natural crab is used the word crab should be used. If a surimir shaped product is used in the menus and recipes should call it krab or sea legs.

If you have never eaten surimi, try one of the following recipes.

Krab Dip

1 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup sour cream
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
10-ounces krab meat, cut in small pieces
1 tablespoon sherry
1 teaspoon lemon juice
salt and pepper to taste

Combine all ingredients and chill. Makes 2 cups.

Krab-Asparagus Casserole

1 pound krab meat, cut in small pieces
2 (10 ounce) cans cut asparagus spears, well drained
1/2 cup sliced almonds
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup low-calorie mayonnaise
2 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
3/4 cup grated cheddar cheese
paprika

Place asparagus in a well-greased casserole. Combine krab, almonds, celery, mayonnaise, and lemon juice. Spread mixture over asparagus. Top with cheese and sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 15 to 20 minutes, or until heated thoroughly and cheese is melted. Serves 8.

Great-Tasting Corn

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Nothing beats the taste of fresh picked sweet corn on a summer afternoon or evening cookout. Summer and fresh sweet corn just naturally seem to go together. Pennsylvania grown sweet corn will soon be in our grocery stores and roadside markets. It is usually available from late July to October in our area.

You do need to take special care when buying and storing sweet corn to keep that delicious summer flavor.

Debra Bryant, Wayne County Extension director, offers these tips from Penn State Cooperative Extension for buying sweet corn.

—Purchase sweet corn that has a bright-green husk and silk ends that are dark and moist.

—Look for kernels that are compact and fill the cob. Test for ripeness by pressing our thumbnail into a kernel about 1/3 of the way down the cob. A milky liquid should squirt out. If there is no milk, then the corn is probably old. If the liquid is clear, the corn is probably immature and its flavor will not be as good.

—Avoid immature kernels that are soft and underdeveloped and over mature kernels that are usually large, excessively firm, and deep in color. Mature kernels are tender and plump and are slightly resistant to pressure.

—Avoid cobs that have shriveled stems. This usually means the cob is old and has not been stored properly.

—One pound of fresh corn in husks has 2 medium ears which yields about 1 cup of kernels.

For more information on preparing and storing sweet corn, request "Enjoy Nature's Fresh Sweet Corn" from your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office. This free brochure also features three recipes using sweet corn. In Wayne County call 717-253-5970 x 239 or stop in the basement of the Wayne County Courthouse, Honesdale, PA to receive your copy.

With blueberries in season, it is time to gather up recipes that have blueberries as the main ingredient. When I was a child, I can remeber going into a heavily wooded area near Jefferson, New York, and picking wild blueberries. My mother and I used to leave by 6 in the morning and stay all day picking blueberries in milk buckets. It was a time to remeber and an experience my children will never know.

Featured Recipe

Today's featured recipe comes from Heidi Negley, the Cumberland County Dairy Princess. She was crowned June 19 at the Embers by Melanie Dietrich, the former county princess.

The previous January, Heidi entered an applesauce cake in the Pennsylvania Farm Show. She won second place in the youth foods division. The recipe for the applesauce cake with caramel frosting, is one that has been passed down in her family.

Here, is the recipe that she believes you will enjoy.

APPLESAUCE CAKE

½ cup butter
1 egg
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup cooked seedless raisins
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup sugar
1¼ cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ cup chopped walnuts
1 cup applesauce

In a large mixing bowl, cream butter and sugar until light and flufly. Add egg and beat until well mixed. In medium bowl, combine raisins, nuts tossed with 1 tablespoon flour. Gradually stir in dry ingredients into batter. Fold in nut mixture and applesauce. Spread evenly in pan. Bake until done.

CARAMEL FROSTING FOR APPLESAUCE CAKE

¼ cup melted butter
3 tablespooms milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup brown sugar
¾ cup confectioners' sugar

In small saucepan, melt butter over low heat. Remove from heat. Add brown sugar, stirring until smooth. Bring to a boil over low heat, stirring constantly. Boil 1 minute; remove from heat. Add milk. With wooden spoon, gradually stir in confectioners' sugar until frosting is thick and smooth. Add vanilla. If frosting is too thick, add enough milk so it's easy to spread.

TAKING TIME

Caregiver Relief

Both Sunday, August 2, and Sunday, August 9, have been designated as Family Days by national service and government organizations. This is natural choice because August is traditionally filled with family reunions, family vacations, and family transitions.

If you think about those gatherings, picnics, college send-offs, trips to the mountains or shore, who shoulders the bulk of the planning and hosting responsibilities? Usually it is a woman — a woman who probably feels sandwiched.

Most moms who are preparing to send their teens off to college are also women who are employed part-time or full-time, they may have younger children still at home. They also may have older family members for whom they share caregiving responsibilities. What a challenge.

Moms with teens are not the only women who are sandwiched between caring for their parents and their children. Women in their sixties and seventies may find themselves doing the same thing — caring for a spouse, managing details for an aunt in a nursing facility, and hosting family get-togethers for their children and grandchildren.

Is there relief for these family caregivers?

Fortunately, many communities are beginning to develop support systems for adults in these demanding situations. In Pennsylvania counties, Area Agencies on aging may have some financial support for families who are assuming physical care for an aging relative. Some churches and community groups are encouraging caregivers to meet and share concerns. These support groups provide caregivers with a much needed break and some well-deserved empathy.

In many cases, it is hard for people to reach out and ask for help. We tend to think, "This is my responsibility. I'm her daughter, I should want to do this." None the less, the job is a big one. It is healthy to seek help.

One thing that I encourage all "sandwiched adults" to do is to find a source of respite care. Respite care is short-term relief. Sometimes, the Visiting Nurses Association or area retirement center offers services. You may start by contacting the area Agency on Aging in your county to find out about the resources in your community.

Even if there are no formalized systems, a respite is crucial! Could a neighbor, friend, member of the church, or other relative assume responsibilities temporarily?

Vacations are one of the reasons families seek respite care for elders who may not be able to travel. Families with teens will find it increasingly difficult to take family vacations. I encourage you to take one this summer before your children scatter. Have you considered it? (I know, some of you parents are saying, "I need a vacation FROM my teen not with my teen".)

How long has it been since you've had a break from being the central organizer, caregiver, hold-things-together-person? You deserve a break.

Start your plans today. Write down on a piece of paper 10 responsibilities that you would like relief from for one or two weeks. If you have a spouse, ask your spouse to help you designate specific people who could provide assistance. Call those people today.

When you speak with your "relief team", stress that each member has one or two specific tasks and that the responsibility will last only two weeks. Be honest and say that you need some time to rest. Offer to help them at a future point.

If you are not in the "sandwiched" crowd, take a look around you. Is there someone who needs a break? What could you offer on a short-term basis? Could you spend the evening with her dad? Would you be willing to pick-up his prescriptions and groceries this week?

I've found that when I take the risk to break out of my own small world and ask for support or offer an extra hand, I end up feeling very good.

Caring takes time. What can you do this week?

Chicken Recipe Contest

Announced this week at the American School Food Service Association (ASFSA) convention was AEB's new Diced Chicken Recipe Contest. Contest objectives are to encourage school foodservice operators to experiment with the chicken product and to generate recipes for AEB use in other promotions.

The grand prize winner will be rewarded with air-fare, accommodations, and registration fee to attend the 1993 ASFSA conventions. Two first and second prizes of $500 and $200, for use by schools to purchase equipment of promotional materials, will also be awarded. Each recipe entered must be for a main dish, serve 50 or more, and use the equivalent of at least 2 ounces of the chicken product per serving. The entry deadline is October 15, 1992. Official entry blanks are available through AEB.

Maryland Fair Holds Costume Animal Contest

TIMONIUM, Md. — 4-H members will have the opportunity to dress up their sheep, goats, horses, dogs, rabbits, and even their beef and dairy steer to enter them in the 1992 Costume Animal Contest, Monday, August 31, at 8 p.m., in the Maryland State Fair's Cow Palace.

"This event gives 4-H members the opportunity to show their well-cared-for animals in a less serious way than the traditional contest," said 4-H Program Coordinator Betty Bures. "It's a fun contest that exhibitors and spectators will both enjoy."

All participants must dress themselves and their animals in costume and write a narration, in story or poem form, which will be read as they show their animal. Ribbons and trophies will be awarded along with a participatory premium for each contestant.

"Cow Ripkin," "Popeye and his Sweet Pea Calf," and "Rudolf the Red-Nosed Rabbit" were among the entries in prior Costume Animal Contests.

The 1992 Maryland State Fair runs from Saturday, August 29, through Monday, September 7. The Fairgrounds open at 8 a.m. for livestock and horse shows, demonstration halls open at 10 a.m., and the Midway opens at 11 a.m. on weekends, and 12 noon on weekdays.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — N. Martin, Newburg, wanted a recipe for using canned whole potatoes. Thanks to a reader who writes that she rinses the potatoes in hot water. Then she makes potato salad or browns them in ham fat after frying ham. She also uses them for scalloped potatoes.

Her sister-in-law puts the potatoes in foil with a dab of butter and salt and pepper on them and lays them on the grill until browned.

ANSWER — Mrs. Riehl, Ronks, requested a recipe for canning salsa without oil like the El Paso brand that is medium hot, chunky style. Thanks to Joanna Garber Miller of Jarrettsville, Md., for sending a recipe that she created after much trial and error. She often freezes chopped vegetables until she has the quality needed to make a multiple batch of salsa.

2 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon garlic powder
1½ teaspoons onion powder
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon chili powder

Combine all chopped vegetables in a large pot. Measure cornstarch and set aside for later. Combine dry seasonings into the vinegar and mix well. (More or less seasonings may be used to suit your preferences). Pour vinegar mixture over vegetables. Bring to a boil, then simmer.

Stir just enough cool water into cornstarch to make a smooth thin paste; pour into mixture in pot, stirring constantly to avoid lumping. Process pints in boiling water bath for 30 minutes; quarts for 45 minutes.

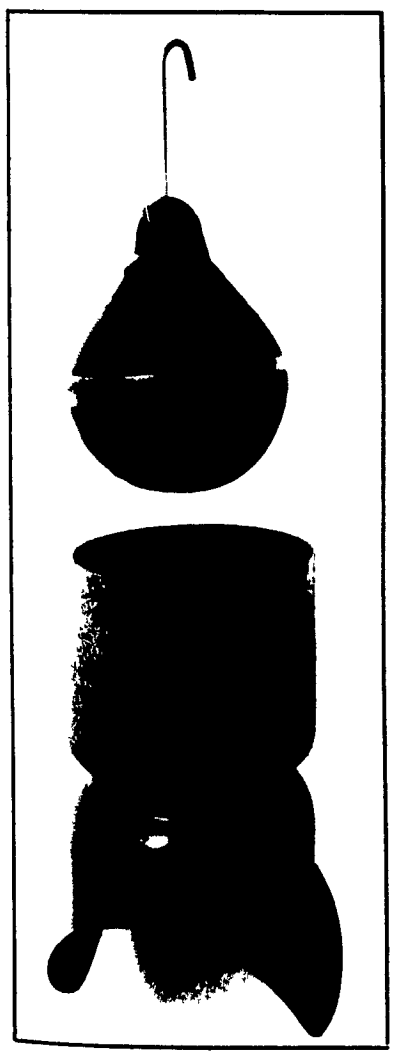
PULL PLUG DRAINS LEAKING?
TRI-COUNTY HAS THE SOLUTION!



APOLLO BALL

This convenient plug for hog manure drains makes a non-leaking seal on the clean-out drain in pull-plug manure systems. It is a major improvement over leaky, concrete plugs.

Sold as a plug and pipe adapter set, the Apollo Ball is a thick, industrial-grade rubber ball that fits into a specially made PVC socket. The ball is filled with sand, which gives it weight but leaves it pliable for a very reliable seal. Molded into its top is a sturdy ring, and attached to this ring is a stainless steel rod with a loop on the end. To open the drain for pen cleaning, you can easily use a simple long-handled hook to catch this loop and lift the ball from its socket.

The socket into which the Apollo Ball Plug seals can be installed on any 8" PVC drain pipe. And in new construction of hog barns, it can be easily included in poured concrete flooring.

Also can be adapted to 6" PVC drains.

Kids Explore Water Quality At Environmental Camp

BETH WHITMAN PITZER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

BLOSERVILLE (Cumberland Co.) — Many of us wonder about the quality of water. We hear lots of reports about acid rain and pollution and wonder exactly how it is affecting our own water supply. Forty-six 4-H'ers in Cumberland County took upon the challenge of exploring water quality and other issues at an environmental camp this past week. The camp was sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Cumberland County and was held on July 27-29 in Bloserville. Bloserville is nestled directly below the Blue Mountain Range in northern Cumberland County.

The youth at camp enjoy activities from nature hikes, to hazardous waste, water quality, orienteering, and caving, to the traditional campfire! Craft activities also went along with the theme. Youth learned to make plant fossils and mount insects. They made recycled paper.

The objective behind all of these activities was to give the youngsters a chance to work on issues related to science and the environment. Anthony Betonte, 4-H Coordinator for Cumberland County, worked with Big Spring School District to reach more rural parts of the county on these issues. Youth came to Frankford Elementary School from nearby Bloserville, Carlisle, Shippensburg, and Mechanicsburg. Mary Laeger-Hagemeister, family living agent in Dauphin County, helped ahead of time by working with parents and teen leaders. Many other volunteer leaders and parents helped to make all of the activities and meals possible.

Let's look more closely at some of the Water Quality Activities. Tom McCarty, Water Quality Agent, began the session with a simple experiment. In a calm, easy-going manner, he added a button to liquid. Youth watched as the bubbles in the liquid pushed the button to the top. The liquid was actually Sprite and the bubbles were carbon dioxide. The point was that fish breathe in oxygen and breathe out carbon dioxide.

The next experiment involved the Conodoguinet Stream, a tributary of the Susquehanna River. Youth captured samples of the stream in special plastic bags. After adding a few needed chemicals, it was determined that 8.9 mg/liter of dissolved oxygen were present in their sample. Tom shared that this is a very good result. Twelve is the highest value possible and around 4, trout can't live. So, plenty of dissolved oxygen was present in the stream for fish to flourish.

Bob Glennon, volunteer, teaches youth to count the number of paces in 100 feet. This is introduction to Orienteering Activities.

Leah Heine, a 4-H helper, explored bugs and creatures living in the creek. They found silverfish, snails, a variety of bugs, and some fresh water clams three inches wide! Lots of creatures living in the water are usually another good sign of high water quality.

Back in Tom's group, the youngsters did experiments on Ph and Nitrate. A Ph Test will determine how acidic or basic the water is. Seven is the mid-point on the scale, with lemon juice having a low Ph and baking soda having a high Ph.

When the stream was tested, the stream was on the basic side with a reading of seven. Tom attributed the number to the limestone stream.

The test for Nitrates was also interesting for the youth. This is an important test especially in this state because we have the highest amount of acid rain in the U.S. A level of 10 is considered not safe to drink. Below 10 is acceptable to drink. When evaluated, the stream read 3.2, a very positive result. A Spectrophotometer was used right on sight to diagnose the result. Tom shared that agriculture hasn't had a big impact on the stream.

Kate Shirk (left) and Meghan Lewis (right) take a sample bag of water for the chemistry component of the Water Quality Activities. Kate and Meghan are part of the "Turtle Totem" for the camp.

Amy Brehm, Kate Shirk, Camisha Hockenberry and Meghan Lewis (left to right) create plant fossils. They have coated a leaf with vaseline and then covered it with plaster. Now that it's dry, it's time to try to remove the leaf!

Lebanon Fair Fascinates Kids

While Jarred Miller, 7, admires the goats, his brother, 5, couldn't resist climbing inside a pen to pretend that he was an animal on display at the Lebanon County Fair. The brothers are the sons of Howard and Teena Miller of Newmanstown.

Children hugged and petted bunnies, goats, a miniature donkey and horse, and other animals at the petting zoo during the week-long Lebanon County Fair. A main attraction was the capuchin monkeys dressed in doll clothing. The monkeys behaved like curious children as they splashed their hands in water, swung by their tails, and climbed around their play-pen cage.

These brothers each picked a different piece of equipment as their favorite at the Lebanon Fair, but they climbed up on this tractor to admire the one six-year-old Jesse chose as his favorite. Jesse and his brothers, from left, Mike, 10; Seth, 5, Aaron, 9; are the sons of Jim and Cindy Goshert of York.

Teachers Taught How To Incorporate Ag In The Classroom

JUDY PATTON
Union Co. Correspondent

"Where do hot dogs come from?" Pennsylvania Secretary of Education Don Carroll asked a fourth grade student while lunching at a school cafeteria.

"I think they grow on bushes" was the student's serious reply.

Secretary Carroll told this story to highlight the desperate need for the Ag in the Classroom program, which the Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living (PFBL) recently launched with its first teachers' workshop. Forty-five kindergarten through fifth grade teachers from throughout Pennsylvania participated in the workshop held July 20 to 23 at Penn State.

Through workshop talks and tours the teachers learned basic facts about Pennsylvania agriculture plus many ideas for interesting class projects. "We are anxious to show our classes how to churn butter or take them to a bakery or supermarket," one teacher commented enthusiastically when talking about activities suggested in the workshop.

PFBL Executive Director Beth Moore, who organized the workshop with much volunteer help, hopes a network between teachers, universities, farm and commodity organizations, FFA, 4-H and the Penn State Ag Ambassadors will spread the Ag in the Classroom program to all Pennsylvania schools. PFBL also wants to establish a Speakers' Bureau through which volunteers will address adult community groups about agriculture.

At the workshop Commodity/Resource Buffet on Wednesday evening, Don Carroll, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff, State Representative Sam Hayes, and Penn State assistant of ag sciences, Dean Don Evans, all voiced the dire need for ag education, starting with kindergarten classes.

Secretary Wolff said the Ag in the Classroom program will help create an informed public that will make better legislative policy decisions on ag-related issues such as land and water use. More knowledgeable consumers will be less subject to unsubstantiated scares about food safety, and urbanites will be less apt to complain about farmers and be more supportive of them. He also feels the program will encourage more students to become highly trained ag scientists.

"We need to close the huge information gap" created because less than 1% of Pennsylvanians are farmers in order to preserve the "safest, cheapest food supply in the world," Wolff stated.

More ag sciences are included among the new educational standards set recently by the Pennsylvania Education Department. Secretary Carroll said teachers are being asked to teach more in a shorter time period, but less rigid curriculum requirements allow them to choose how to attain certain performance standards.

Don Evans offered the use of Penn State's ag science resources to help teachers meet the challenges of reducing ag illiteracy. He helped initiate the Governor's School in Agriculture at Penn State to provide more ag scientists, which in turn can help newly formed democracies in Eastern Europe to establish their own agricultural programs.

Also at the banquet Beth Moore gave awards to volunteers for outstanding contributions to the Ag in the Classroom program. Priscilla Feir, assistant superintendent of the Derry Township school district, was recognized for working with teachers Diane Weigard and Vicky Miller to produce a promotional video. Ellis Griffith, outgoing PFBL president and superintendent of the Juniata Valley school district, was also rewarded for a video production.

Pennsylvania Farmers' Association representatives Marlin Miller and Fred Kerr received awards for fund raising and general support and guidance. Norm Wilkinson of the Pennsylvania Society for Biomedical Research was rewarded for conducting a workshop session and tour and for sponsoring four teachers at the workshop.

Other organizations sponsoring teachers were Adams County Fruit Growers, Milton Hershey School, PA County Farmers' Associations, PFA Apple Advisory Committee, PFA Marketing Cooperative, PFA Young Farmer and Rancher Committee, Allied Milk Producers and the Southern Chester County Mushroom Industry.

Organizations who sponsored the Commodity/Resource Buffet were: PA Beef Council, Holly Milk, PA Poultry Federation, Sani-Dairy, Southern Chester County Mushroom Industry, and PA Vegetables Growers Association.

At a PFBL board meeting, the new officers elected were: Don Unangst (PA ASCS), president; Marvin Beshore (attorney), vice president; Tracy Hoover (Penn State Ag Sciences Extension and Education), secretary; and Laura England (Atlantic Dairy Cooperative), treasurer.

Other board members are: Ellis Griffith; Don Mincemoyer (retired Penn State Professor); Steve Bussen (Monsanto Ag Company); Ferman Gyger (PA Grange); Dick Hann (Hershey School); Jim Yeatman (Southern Chester County Mushroom Growers); Dave Wurster (Bucks County dairyman); Pat Sueck (York County farmer); Don Evans; and Carol Ann Gregg (PA Agri-Women).

For more information on the Ag in the Classroom program or other PFBL activities, contact Beth Moore, Chambersburg, PA, (717) 375-2639.

Naturalist Shares Fascination With Wildflowers

SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent
(From a meadow on a farm in New Windsor, MD.)

FINKSBURG, Md. — Armed with a well-worn copy of Newcomb's guide to wildflowers, a camera with a close-up lens, a small pocket knife, a magnifying glass and a love of wildflowers, naturalist, Dave Pyle, of Finksburg, Maryland, heads out into the meadow.

Most people traipse right over the spot where Dave gets down on his knees to admire a candidate for one of the smallest wildflowers — the Thyme-leaved Speedwell. He takes great pleasure in examining the beauty of the little yellow buttercup or Ranunculus acris, its taxonomic name.

"It's sad that people get away from the taxonomic names," commented Pyle, as he examined the buttercup. "It's the key to understanding and identifying flowers," he explained. For example, perfoliate means the flower grows through the leaf — per meaning through and foliate — leaf."

Explaining further, he said that sometimes "the common name and the taxonomic name are the same, such as Veronica. "The names of flowers are fascinating," observed Dave. "They have history, geography, religion, medicine, mythology, and legends." He illustrated with the story behind the buttercup. "Pliny the Elder found a little yellow flower next to a pond. He named it Ranunculus acris. Ranunculus means little frog," also a common sight around the edge of a pond.

Another example of the descriptive taxonomic name is the Sulphur Cinquefoil, a weed the rose family, accordi
Peterson's A Field Guide to Wildflowers, common to the New Windsor, Maryland area. "Cinque is the French word for five; foil-fingers," he explained. A perfect description of the five-petaled yellow flower. Sulphur refers to the yellow color of the prolific little local wildflower.

Pyle said that most taxonomic names are Latin, but one other wildflower of the area carries a French name. Creeping Charlie, or Gill Over the Ground, is Glechoma hederacea, "from the French meaning brew. This wildflower was used originally to brew beer," he explained.

"Many of the flowers have religious names in both the common and taxonomic names," related Pyle, also a licensed minister. "Many are named after saints or the times that they bloom — St. Johnswort, for example. St. Patrick used the Shamrock which is Tri-folium (three leaved) to explain the trinity."

Pyle said he was "really interested in nature when I was a teenager. I got away from it when I got into education," he recalled. He spent 31 years in education, serving as administrative assistant to the superintendent and supervisor of elementary education for Baltimore County Schools.

"Ten or 15 years ago I got into the photography end of it," said Dave. "My minister invited me to his cottage in West Virginia, and it has become a regular excursion. I have around 3,000 flower slides," he said.

The relating of wildflowers to Bible verses came as a natural progression for Pyle, who calculated that he just passed his 600th sermon in 58 different churches. His home church is Sandymount United Methodist Church in Westminster, Maryland.

"I do things on the Flowers of the Bible," said Dave. He explained that often, general names were used to refer to all flowers, and that the "lilies of the field" were probably not lilies, but flowers such as the Anemone or Windflower. "Breath of wind and the Spirit are one in the same," he added.

Pyle consulted his copy of Newcomb's field guide to wildflowers when he came upon a variety of wild mustard with which he was not familiar. He pointed out that he looks for many details when trying to identify a wildflower. How many leaves? Round stem or triangular like that of the Sedge, or square like that of the mints? He considers all of the physical features of the plant, often using a little magnifying glass to examine the underside of petals. He considers the location of the plant. Is it growing in a damp area or in a sunny, dry spot?

"I've been stung by all kinds of insects. I came home covered by welts when I was in the swamps. I had 23 hornet stings when I stepped on a nest. I had Lyme Disease last year. I've been shot at, and I've gotten banged up from falls when I was climbing up the mountains."

After some wildflower detective work, he identified the plant with "a unique leaf, a tiny yellow flower with four petals, undeveloped leaves lying against the stem," as Hedge Mustard. He then pulled out the camera and, down on his knees, positioned himself to capture the best shot of the wildflower. "Sometimes you have to move around a flower," he explaines. "You have to capture the spirit of a flower; you've got to feel a flower to capture it on film."

Pyle's photographs are on display at Oregon Ridge Nature Center. As president of the Hashawa-Bear Branch Nature Center, his work appears at the Carroll County, Maryland site with regularity. A pamphlet that he wrote describing 20 stations at Piney Run Park will be out this summer under the title, Lakeside Guide.

His works appear at several area nature centers. Dave also offers enlargements of his photographs for sale, under the name "God's Glory Made Visible. If there is a story behind the flower, I write the legend and paste it on the back," he added.

In trying to capture wildflowers on film, Pyle has endured all of the hardships of the naturalist in the field. "I've been stung by all kinds of insects. I came home covered by welts, when I was in the swamps. I had 23 hornet stings when I stepped on a nest. I had Lyme Disease last year. I've been shot at, and I've gotten banged up from falls when I was climbing up mountains — I was more worried about my equipment than myself," he mused.

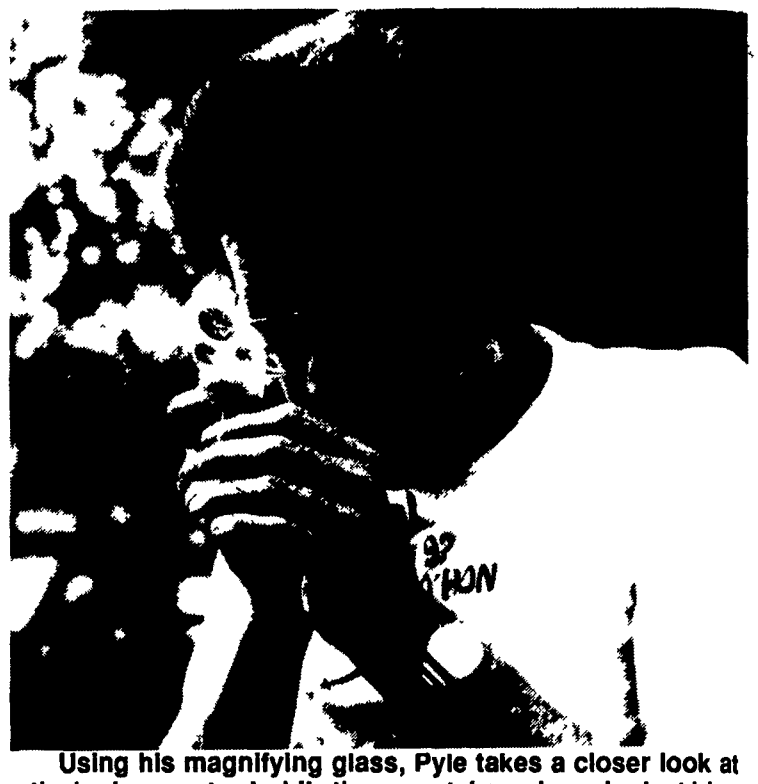
Pyle enjoys sharing his vocation with others. "I'm a leader for the wildflower Pilgrimage in Blackwater Falls State Park in the Canaan Valley of West Virginia. He often gets phone calls from individuals with questions about wildflowers. "They'll say that they found a yellow flower with five petals — what is it? I get calls all the time." Through his detail-oriented sleuthing, Dave can usually identify a flower, however, some he identifies as "that's a come back later," indicating that it may be more easily identified in a different stage of growth. Pyle also speaks to church, school and civic groups. He recently presented a slide show to the ladies of the Pipe Creek Ministerium at their annual dinner held at St. Paul's United Methodist Church in New Windsor, Maryland.

Dave encourages others to become backyard naturalists, and offers some tips. "Leave the flowers where they are, for God to take care of," he advised. "People try to transplant wildflowers and are often unsuccessful because they have to duplicate the environment."

Those who wish to establish wildflower gardens should "know their source. That's the key to developing wildflower gardens," he advised. "Learn something about wildflowers — get books that tell you which ones can be planted successfully." Mr. Pyle also suggested starting small. "take a small section of your yard to establish in wildflowers, because people who don't appreciate nature see it as weeds," he warned.

Dave Pyle hopes to compile the extensive notes that he has gathered in the field into a book. "That's one of my goals," he said. "Most of all, I'd like to teach people the gift of awareness. We only use a small part of our senses."

Pyle may be reached at (410) 876-2725 for more information about his slide shows, workshops, wildflower photography and nature walks.



Using his magnifying glass, Pyle takes a closer look at the hedge mustard while the cows take a closer look at him.

Dave Pyle, naturalist, takes a closer look at the dandelion. He carries a magnifying glass with him on his outings and with his camera has captured the beauty of wildflowers in his display of 3,000 flower slides.

Dave Pyle examines the flower of the poison hemlock. He often consults Newcombe's Guide to Wildflowers to make a positive identification. As a minister, Pyle relates wildflowers to numerous Bible verses.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The fact that my parents had an annual picnic in July probably helped us children to continue the tradition. Just recently some 30 members of our family gathered at my sister's house from all over the state and nearby states.

It was a rainy day and so we could not appreciate their beautiful grounds and garden. The television set grabbed the attention of the younger set as the Olympic Games were on it that day. We shared talk, pictures and food. Oh, so much food.

Then we brought our oldest grandson home with us. He is 12 years old and just moved to New Jersey from Seattle. David found life here in the country to be too quiet and rather boring. He is not accustomed to working as our boys were at the same age. They had animals to tend early in the morning and they did field work too. As a great sports fan, he enjoyed watching television.

One day we took a trip to Sweet Arrow in Schuylkill County. Even though we got up at 5:45 there were several boats on the lake ahead of us. The weather was very nice but we did not catch any fish there. Then, at David's urging, we went a "fee fishing" place and caught five nice-sized trout. They surely made a delicious supper for us that night. Of course, I did freeze some and gave two to our son Philip.

We expect to take David to his home in New Jersey and also to deliver some heavy shelves that my husband has made for our daughter. So far Allen has put together about six shelves to store boxes of things that we can't bear to throw out. He is getting to be an expert builder of strong shelves.

Lebanon County Fair Queen Allison Martin, left, hands ribbons to senior division winners: Jamie Irwin, Alice Smith, Lee Brandt, and Leah Bomberger.

Contestants Model Woolly Best At Lebanon Leadline

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Competition at the Lebanon County Fair Leadline promoted the attractiveness of the sheep and wool industry on July 28.

Dressed in wool attire, junior and senior division contestants led classy-looking sheep around the show ring before a panel of three judges.

Jamie Irwin placed first in the senior division and Ann Leed placed first in the junior division.

This was Jamie's third year as a first-place winner. The 15-year-old participates in other modeling and beauty contests. For leadline competition, Jamie chose to wear a white, red, and black pleated plaid skirt topped with a red turtleneck and a basic black blazer — all made of wool.

As a six year member of a 4-H sheep club, Jamie has 10 sheep of her own, but she chose to borrow a sheep from a friend, Laura Martin, because the sheep was better behaved.

Jamie is the daughter of John L. and Linda Irwin of Fredericksburg. She attends Tulpohocken Area High School where she participates in tract, tennis, basketball, and swimming.

Second place in the senior division went to Alice Smith, 16. She wore a black wool suit with a long pleated skirt topped by a short, trimmed jacked and a red wool sweater. The 16-year-old is the daughter of Henry and Sandy Smith and is a junior at Annville-Cleona High School. She has been a 4-H member for eight years and is president of the the 4-H teen council and a teen representative to livestock leader meetings. She is a member of the 4-H board of directors for three years. For six years, she has been breeding registered Suffolks. Alice recently returned from Europe where she toured with the U.S. Music Ambassadors Concert Band and Choir.

Third place went to Lee Brandt of Manheim. He wore 100 percent Burlington wool lined vest and slacks. The ninth grader at Palmyra High School is a track member and plays the saxophone.

Fourth place went to Leah Bomberger of Fredericksburg. The 14-year-old wore a 100 percent worsted wool suit that she made in her fifth year as a member of the 4-H Pins and Needles Club. She led a fall ewe lamb, which is her FFA project at Lebanon. She has a flock of five Dorset ewes and 8 lambs. She is a member of the 4-H Teen Council, plays field hockey and the French horn and member of her church youth group.

First place Junior Division winner Ann Leed, the daughter of Bob and Nancy Leed of Myerstown, is 10 years old. She wore a wool purple split skirt with a wool patterned sweater and woold knee socks.

She is a two-year member of the 4-H Sheep Club. Her family has six Dorset and two Hampshire ewes.

Ann was a third place winner last year. She said that she spent a lot of time teaching White Lily, the registered Dorset that she led, to walk properly.

Second place in the junior division went to Becky Kleinfelter. She wore a 100 percent worsted wool suit

LEADERSHIP AT WORK

Eggs — Naturally Smart Food

"A Naturally Smart Food" is the theme of American Egg Board's newest egg advertising campaigne, which was introduced to the Board last week. TV commercials and print ads developed for the campaign will begin running in test markets early next month.

The commercials and print ads are built around the concept that, although chickens are not mentally brilliant animals, they produce a very smart food -- eggs -- that are wholesome, natural and nutritious.

Filmed with a live chicken frolicking in beautiful green grass in front of a bright blue sky, the TV commercials create a cartoon-style mood highlighted by music and sound effects while the announcer speaks of the benefits of eggs. In the closing scene, the consumer sees a close-up of an egg left in the grass by the chicken, with the works "A Naturally Smart Food" superimposed below it. Print ads carry similar graphics and copy.

The advertising strategy was created after considerable consumer research to determine which messages would be the strongest in motivating consumers to use more eggs.

The campaign will appear in four matched markets to measure the effect of the advertising at different media levels. The test will be conducted over the course of a year and egg sales in the test markets will be compared quarterly with sales in control markets, using scanner data. Consumer attitudes and egg usuage will also be measured during the test.

accented with black braid trim on the jacket. It was complemented with a white blouse, black hat, shoes, and gloves. For four years, she has been a member of the Lebanon County Livestock Club and enjoys showing sheep. She has 3 Dorset rams, 10 ewes, and 6 crossbreeds on her farm.

Judges included Dorothy Brubaker, Hampshire breeder from Lebanon County and former coordinator for the Keystone Exposition Leadline; John Eaton, York County sheep breeder; and Nancy Thompson, buyer from Boscov's.

Judges rated both the sheep and the leadsperson on appearance, fit, modeling, and ability to keep the sheep under control.

DEALING WITH SURPLUS MANURE

Leon Ressler
Extension Agent
Agriculture/Environment
Lancaster County

The cornerstone of manure management in the 1990s is developing a nutrient management plan.

Nutrient management simply stated is bringing nutrient flows into balance on a farm. Manure nutrients are applied at a rate calculated to meet crop needs and build adequate soil fertility.

After subtracting total crop needs from the total manure nutrients produced on a farm, one may still have a balance of nutrients remaining. Developing a plan to utilize these extra nutrients is an important step in nutrient management.

The first thing one should consider in this situation is alternative cropping patterns which will utilize more nutrients. One should view crops as nutrient consumers and look for combinations that utilize the maximum amounts of nutrients.

A typical crop on poultry farms is corn harvested as grain, which consumes 150 pounds of nitrogen (N), 35 pounds of phosphorous (P), and 60 pounds of potassium (K) per acre (150 bushel/acre yield).

A farmer may have a neighbor who is a livestock producer who may be interested in buying the crop as corn silage (22 tons/acre) double-cropped with ryelage. This double crop combination will consume 220N-120P-150K. Other alternatives to consider include orchardgrass hay, which consumes 240N-40P-360K if you harvest six tons per acre, or reed canarygrass which is a heavy phosphorus consumer.

Alfalfa is a heavy consumer of all three nutrients and can be used to quickly reduce high soil levels of potash. Alfalfa also will reduce high phosphorus levels in the soil also, but not nearly as quickly as it "mines" potash.

A producer may be able to arrange a field trade with a neighbor who grows alfalfa — he grows his alfalfa in your high fertility field while you grow your corn with your manure in his lower fertility field.

Another option is to increase cropping acreage by land-purchase or long-term lease. Land-purchase based on manure disposal alone could rarely be justified financially. However, it may work for your particular situation.

If a farmer plans a new operation and is counting on leased land to utilize the additional manure produced, a long-term lease is essential. The lease should be long enough to enable you to recover your investment in facilities if this is your only manure utilization option.

A third option that will be the most practical for many is direct marketing of the surplus manure to another operation. Many poultry farmers have been successful at this venture. I met one poultryman last year who told me he buys a new car each year with his profit from his poultry manure sales.

Several points should be kept in mind if one wants to market his manure to others. Keeping the manure dry is a must. The drier the product, the further one can justify shipping it, since it has a higher value per ton.

As in all business, there is competition, and one must remember what the competition offers in order to compete successfully.

One of the advantages of commercial fertilizer is its convenience. One could increase market opportunities by making use of his manure more convenient by offering delivery or custom application service.

Twenty two percent of those responding to a manure marketing survey I conducted said they were only interested in using another's manure if application service was available. Manure testing is important to give one's customers some idea of the nutrient value of his manure. Remember, however, that the manure test is only a guideline and not a guarantee, as are the numbers on the fertilizer bag.

In order to promote manure marketing, I have been developing manure supplier and receiver lists. This list is organized by county and township and is updated and sent out annually to participants. If you are interested in participating in this information exchange, contact me at the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Office at (717) 394-6851.

A fourth possibility for utilizing surplus manure is processing the manure for sale in an altered form. Composting is being done successfully by some poultry producers in Pennsylvania. The primary disadvantages of composting are the investment in facilities and the time required to manage the operation. However, the process reduces flies, odor, and volume of manure as well as creates a product which has more potential markets than fresh manure. The potential for success is there for those with good marketing skills.

If after developing a nutrient management plan you determine you have more manure than you can utilize in your operation, carefully evaluate these options.

Simply going back over the same acres with the manure spreader an additional time is not an option.

4-H Dairy Goat Roundup Largest In Years

KIMBERTON (Chester Co.) — The Chester County 4-H Dairy Goat Roundup was held at the Kimberton Fairgrounds recently.

A total of 50 project goats were shown, more than double last year's show entries. In the past three years, the number of goats shown has averaged about 20. This year, because of the large number of entries, the show was divided into two classes — Alpines and all other breeds.

Joan Stump, an Alpine breeder and showperson from Telford, instructed the 4-H'ers in how to improve their showing and fitting techniques. In the Alpine Class with 23 entries, she made Christine Anderson, Landenberg, senior and grand champion with her beautiful 3- to 5-year-old doe, Mai-Tai. Jami Hanna, Nottingham, showed a 2-year-old doe, Ebony, that was strong competition for the champion and was named reserve senior and reserve grand champion. Junior champion honors were swept by Laura Anderson, Landenberg. Her yearling kid, Cossette, was junior champion and Carsela, a kid under 4 months, captured the reserve junior champion ribbon.

In the other breeds combined class, the following breeds were exhibited: 15 Toggenburgs, five Oberhasli, four LaMancha, two Nubian, and one Sonnen. Senior

Leader Says Ag Needs Plan

DENVER, Colo. — "Ten years ago farmers were ignored by environmental groups. Today agriculture shares the spotlight and is in the process of becoming center stage," said James Moseley, former USDA assistant secretary for natural resources and the environment.

Speaking to the U.S. Feed Grains Council's annual meeting here, Moseley addressed the challenge agriculture faces concerning environmental and natural resource issues.

"We have an obligation to use resources responsibly and sensibly, and we already do that," said Moseley. He said that it is part of the agrarian ethic.

However, society is getting confusing signals from agriculture. The agricultural industry must make Congress understand the link between agriculture, economics, and the environment.

We need a plan, Moseley said. "We better figure out how to put together a plan for natural resources policy or policy decisions are going to be made with or without our input."

Environmentalists had a plan, had finances, and put together a lobbying effort.

"On the environment, the choice is ours to make, but we must do it with urgency," Moseley said.

4-H Dairy Goat Roundup

and grand champion went to a 2-year-old LaMancha shown by Sean Holz, Phoenixville, followed closely by Jason Wagner, Spring City, with Reni, a yearling Toggenburg that Mrs. Stump chose for her reserve senior and reserve grand champion. The junior champion was a beautiful LaMancha kid under 4 months named Samantha and shown by Ben Hendricks, Phoenixville. Jason Wagner's yearling kid, Tina, was the reserve junior champion.

A new class this year was the highlight of the roundup as the judge selected Christine Anderson's grand champion Alpine doe for best in show honors. Sean Holz gave her stiff competition as he captured the reserve best in show ribbon with his grand champion LaMancha doe.

In the fitting and showing competition, Kathleen Anderson, Landenberg, was the senior champion (for members more than 14 years old) for fitting and Dominic Hanna, Nottingham, took the showmanship award. In the junior competition, Laura Anderson was first for both fitting and showing.

Christine Anderson, Landenberg was picked as the best first year fitter. Top 1st year showperson was Theresa Holz, Phoenixville. Jessica Bohmier of New London, a Cloverbud at age seven, was the audience favorite and gained considerable experience as she exhibited four goats and did an excellent job of fitting and showing. Joan Stump, the judge, complemented the exhibitors on how well they had prepared and shown their goats.

Stotts Named Program Director

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Laurie A. Stotts has been named director of programs for the Agriculture Council of America (ACA), a broad-based membership organization representing agricultural producers, suppliers, processors and retailers.

Stotts will focus on expansion of the FoodWatch program, a nationwide public education and awareness program designed to build public confidence in the food and agriculture industry. She also will be coordinating the National Agriculture Day program.

Since 1989, Stotts served as executive vice president and chief operations officer at the American National Cattle Women, Inc. in Englewood, Colo. While there she directed the effort to reorganize the association into a nationally recognized entity responsible for a significant role in the cattle industry's worldwide promotion and marketing program. Prior to that, she was communications and marketing director for the Colorado Cattle Feeders Association of Denver, Colo.

Formed in 1973 in a merger of the National Educational Institute for Agriculture and the National Agricultural Communications Board, ACA serves as a communications arm for agriculture through which food and agriculture interests work together to promote and build public support for the industry.

New Planter From White-New Idea

COLDWATER, Ohio — A new planter model will be introduced this fall by White-New Idea Farm Equipment Co.

The new White 6600 planters feature row widths ranging from 15 inches to 40 inches. It's the ideal planter for growers wanting to take advantage of today's genetically improved soybean and corn hybrids which perform best when planted in 20-22 inch rows.

Its two-bar design also provides the room and strength to easily adapt to a multitude of tillage practices — fall tillage, spring tillage, no-till, or ridge till. Row-unit mounted or frame-mounted coulters can be used to work the seedbed just in front of the row units on the 5 inch x 7 inch back toolbar with plenty of room for other attachments on the 5 inch x 7 inch front toolbar. Like the other White planter models, there is also a 3-1/2 inch diamond bar for hanging fertilizer openers.

Four sizes are available. The model 6604 (135 inch toolbars) plants four 28-40 inch rows. Additional row units can be added for six 20-22 inch rows or nine 15 inch rows. The model 6606 (172 inch toolbars) comes with six row units for planting 28-32 inch rows. Additional row units can be added for eight 20-22 inch rows or eleven 15 inch rows. The model 6616 plants six 36-40 inch rows. The model 6608 comes with eight row units for planting 28-32 inch rows. Both the 6616 and the 6608 feature 224 inch toolbars so additional row units can be added for ten 20-22 inch rows or fourteen 15 inch rows.

The 6000 series row unit is known for its accurate seed spacing and depth control, placing the seed in the optimum environment for germination and emergence. Low pressure, positive air metering singulates so each seed is evenly spaced. The 18 inch seed drop reduces bounce and roll. Walking beam gauge wheels control seed depth even in rough ground, and 1/8 inch depth adjustments provide unequalled depth control.

White-New Idea manufactures and markets planters, tillage equipment, hay tools, manure spreaders, and self-propelled harvesting equipment under the White, New Idea and UNI brand names, as well as Ag ONE parts and supplies. For more information, call (800)767-3221.

Gehl Announces Finance Relationship With ITT

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The Gehl Company, a major manufacturer of agricultural products and construction equipment, recently announced a new finance relationship with ITT Commercial Finance Corp. to provide working capital and to replace the majority of Gehl's outstanding loans from other financing sources. Under the new arrangement, ITT will provide a $75 million credit facility to provide Gehl advances on its dealer receivables.

ITT will service the Gehl account from its regional office in Memphis, Tenn., which specializes in financing farm equipment, construction equipment and industrial products.

"We formed a strategic alliance when we teamed up with Gehl. They are a major force in the agriculture and construction equipment industries, and ITT is a leader in the inventory finance industry. I believe combining our strengths creates a successful business mix," said ITT Central Division President Geoffrey Lyon.

"We are familiar with ITT and its interest in serving both agricultural and construction equipment companies with floorplan programs. They understand our business, which we feel is very important," said Gehl President Bernard Nielson. "We see ITT as a lender that will look to the future with us on how we can grow and improve profitability. We've found that ITT has the same types of interests as Gehl."

Established in 1859, Gehl is a leading non tractor manufacturer of agricultural equipment in North America. Gehl's agricultural roster includes equipment for hay making, forage havesting, manure handling, feed markers, and materials handling that is used in day-to-day livestock farming.

Gehl's primary customers in the agricultural industry are dairy, beef, hog, and poultry farmers. Gehl also manufactures construction equipment.

ITT Commercial Finance, a multibillion dollar commercial finance company, is one of the nation's largest independent companies in the specialized field of inventory and accounts receivable financing. The company serves customers through offices located in most major metropolitan areas of the United States. ITT Commercial Finance provides financing to dealers, distributors, and manufacturers of consumer and commercial products.

Institute Establishes Task Force

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Fertilizer Institute (TFI) has established the Retail Compliance Task Force of TFI's Retail Business Council to help retail fertilizer and ag chemical retail dealers comply with the morass of regulations.

The task force is comprised of compliance specialists in the retail sector and will provide a forum for sharing compliance information among the entire retail community.

Other goals for the task force include identification of resource experts who can help dealers in various regulatory areas, establishment of a database of regulations that will be made available to retail dealers, cooperation with state associations to develop resources that are state-specific, and to provide guidance to TFI staff in formulating responses to federal regulators.

"It is widely recognized that regulators write and enforce regulations based upon the 'least common denominator' or the worst case to be found," said TFI Retail Business Council Chairman Mike Hochgesang. "For this reason, the entire industry benefits from efforts like this to help all dealers identify compliance issues and provide the information needed to comply."

"Compliance has become the number one concern of many dealers today," said TFI President Gary D. Myers. "This task force will help retailers pool their resources in an attempt to keep up with the ever-changing compliance landscape."

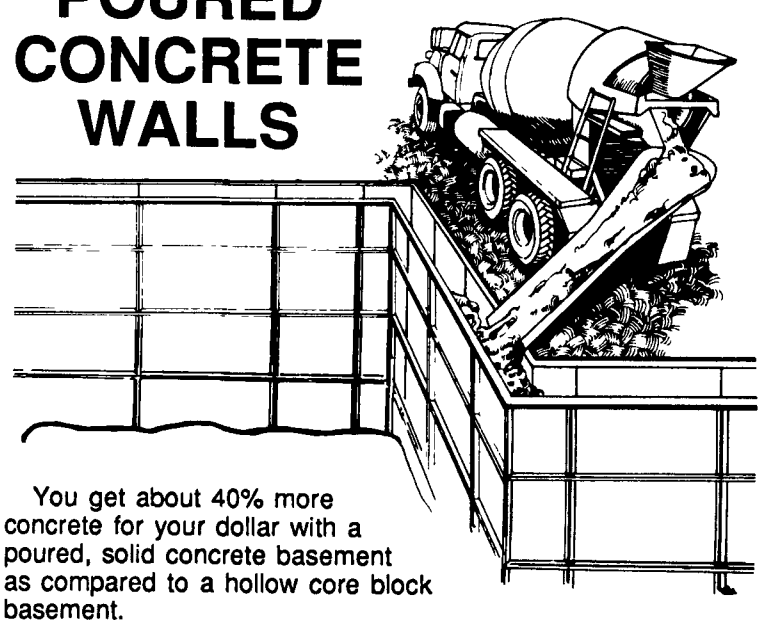
POURED SOLID CONCRETE STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS

START WITH THE BEST!
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement.

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic ... there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced.

walked away with some money in their pockets after the 13th annual Robert L. Finkenbider FFA Livestock Sale at the Shippensburg Community Fair.

The grandchampion market steer, owned by Eric Berkheimer of Cumberland Valley High School, weighed in at 1,110 pounds. It was bought by CCNB Bank for $4.60 a pound.

The reserve grand champion steer was a 990-poiunder owned by Todd Rabert, also of Cumberland Valley. Rabert's animal sold for $2.40 a pound to Hoss' Steak House.

In the market goat sale, the grand champion, weighing in at 70 pounds, was owned by Andy Rook of Big Spring High School. That goat was purchased by Bill Piper for $2 a pound.

The reserve champion market goat was a 73-pound animal owned by Mike Cornman of Big Spring. It was bought by Penn Shire LaMandhas for $1.50 a pound.

Mike Cornman earned more money in the market lamb sale. He had the grand champion animal in that event, a 119-pound lamb that was purchased for $2.10 a pound by Rick Fogelsanger for the G.L. Fogelsanger Agency.

The reserve grand champion market lamb was a 114-pound animal owned by Megan Souder of Cumbreland Valley. Her animal solf for $1.35 a pound to Jeff Craig for the Greencastle Livestock Market.

Mike Cornman again did well in the market swine sale, where he had the grand champion hog. That animal, weighing in at 230 pounds, was bought by Wayne F. Craig and Sons for $2.05 a pound.

The reserve grand champion market hog, a 235-pound animal owned by Brian Goodhart of Shippensburg High School, was purchased by Kevin Campbell for the Shippensburg Agway Farm Center for $2.05 a pound.

Rick Fogelsanger of G.L. Fogelsanger Agency, Shippensburg, purchased the grand champion market lamb owned by Mike Cornman and shown by Michelle Cornman for $2.10 a pound.

Horse Show Dates Set For NAILE

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Class offerings and dates for the 1992 North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE) Quarter Horse Show are now confirmed.

This year three AQHA events have been added to the already impressive offering: amateur calf roping, amateur steer roping (heading), and amateur steer roping (heeling). The dates for this year's Quarter Horse Show are November 6-12.

Another change is the modification of existing classes. AQHA youth mares and geldings classes will be split. The North American Calf Roping Classic has a new fee and payback schedule and dally team roping, 40 years and over, will include a finals round for the top 10 competitors.

The 1992 schedule will be similar to that of 1991. The major change in this area involves movement of some classes previously held on Monday to Sunday in order to accommodate an earlier start for the NAILE team penning on Monday afternoon. Last year's team penning event spanned nearly 12 hours. This year it will start at noon on Monday, November 9. Premiums in 1991 were nearly $12,000. They are expected to be even larger this year.

All National Cutting Horse Association classes will be held on Friday, November 6. Youth events are scheduled for the weekend, November 7 and 8, to better accommodate youngsters' school schedules.

Premiums for the entire Quarter Horse Show now exceed $50,000, and the show consistently ranks in the top five of those held in the United States. The entry deadline is October 31, 1992; post entries are double. Premium List and entry forms can be requested by calling (502)-588-3166 or by writing NAILE, P.O. Box 36367, Louisville, KY 40233.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

HUGHSVILLE (Lycoming Co.) — Five first place winners, one second place winner, and two third place winners were won by Adam Fraley in the Lycoming County Youth Dairy Roundup.

This made Fraley the winner in total numbers of ribbons and awards. In addition, he was awarded junior championship in the Ayrshire breed and reserve junior championship in the Holsteins.

Junior 4-H exhibitors, not eligible to show as regular 4-H members, made a good appearance as they showed their junior calves.

First place in the class went to Seth Derr, with second place being won by Christopher Knipe. Both are members of the State Road 4-H; both showed Jersey calves.

Fraley, of the Hillcrest Club, won the junior championship, while Rae Ann Fogleman showed the reserve junior championw ith her senior yearling.

Spring calf first place went to an entry by Roberta Fogleman, while Randi Fogleman placed first with his summer yearling.

All of the Foglemans are members of the Hillcrest Club, too.

Fraley's spring yearling won its class, as Randi Fogleman again came in with a second place.

Heather Swisher was third in the class, representing the 118 Ag Club.

In the senior classification, Randi's junior 2-year-old weas tops, Roberta Fogleman was first with her senior 2-year-old, and Randi came out first as winner in the 4-year-old class.

The 5-year-old class found Rae Ann Fogleman edging out Randi; then Roberta's 6-year-old earned another first place for her owner.

Winning all of the senior top awards was an extra plus for the Hillcrest 4-H Club.

The senior champion and grand champion Ayrshire was Roberta Fogleman's HD Farms M.D. Tina, a 6-year-old cow, and Rae Ann Fogleman earned the reserve senior and reserve grand championship Ayrshire honors with Ardrossan Rebel Rose Lot.

Ask Before You Alter Wetlands

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. — Are you planning to ditch out a wet area in your pasture or hay field? How about putting in a pond or developing a low wet area? Are you planning to remove brush from a wet spot for pasture or cropland?

Rollin Swank, state conservationist, Soil Conservation Service (SCS), said that if you make any changes or plan maintenance in wet areas and wetlands, the activity must be approved prior to the time of conversion. The 1990 Farm Bill states that if you alter a wet area or wetland to make agricultural production possible, you may lose eligibility for many USDA program benefits — not only on the converted wet area, but for all of your farm.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) can provide information about the effects of swampbuster.

SCS conservationists can tell you if you have wetlands and if they are exempt from the swampbuster provisions. Both offices will be glad to help you to remain qualified for farm program benefits.

Contact your local SCS of ASCS office for more information.

ne Peterman placing first with her sister Rhonda coming in second. Edward Swisher and his sister Abby showed the first and second place spring yearlings, respectively.

First place winter yearling was shown by Julia Groff, State Road Club, and Katie Ulrich won first place with her fall yearling. Katie is from the Bald Eagle Club.

Yvonne Peterman showed Petermans-Pride Sarg Macbee to win the junior championship Jersey class. Nobledale Parsons Robyn qualified for reserve junior champion, and was shown by owner Edward Swisher.

Yvonne Peterman entered and won first place with both her senior 2-year-old and 5-year-old Jersey classes. These two animals were also senior champion and grand champion award winners. The 5-year-old Petermans-Pride Overdrive Melon won the top award, while the 3-year-old Petermans-Pride Volunt Macey received the reserve senior champion's ribbon and the reserve grand championship trophy.

Because there were only two entries shown in the Brown Swiss breed, Curtis Ulmer, owner of both and member of the State Road Club, took home all the marbles. First place, junior championship, and grand championship honors went to the winter calf Princess Eventide Roxette, and Ulmer's spring yearling, Princess Eventide Polly, received the runnerup awards in this group.

Over 60 head of Holsteins were shown in the youth competition.

In the senior division, Adam Fraley won with his junior 2-year-old, and Milissa Daly, 118 Ag placed second.

The junior champion Holstein is shown by Adam Fraley. Also shown is the reserve junior champion, also owned by Fraley.

Kathryn Jarrett won the senior 2-year-old class; Brian Cooley of Bald Eagle had the 3-year-old winner. Rhonda Peterman placed second. Both these were cows in milk.

A dry 3-year-old was shown by Roberta Fogleman, and was awarded the blue ribbon. Kathryn Jarrett took her 4-year-old to first place with second place going to Jason Cooley.

Melaine Jarrett's 5-year-old gave her another first place, with Brian Cooley showing the second

Kutztown Senior Shows Berks County Champion Hog

Brian Tworkoski of Kutztown relinquishes his champion hog at the Berks County FFA Hog Show at the Leesport Market and Auction to Tom Moyer, hog buyer for Hatfield Quality Meats, for $2.25 a pound.

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Brian Tworkoski was only a little sad that the future for his 260-pound porker, "Chuckie," would be as a sausage for Hatfield Quality Meats.

He was thrilled, however, that Chuckie won grand champion honors last Wednesday at the Berks County FFA Hog show here in the Leesport Market and Auction show ring.

A 1992 graduate of Kutztown Area High School, Brian toiled four years in FFA shows to finally get a grand champion hog.

His Yorkshire barrow, though not the largest in the show, was the best muscled and had the most correct structure, said Brian, relating the comments of judge Bob Mikesell, a supervisor for White Oak Mills, Juniata County.

Brian Beam, who exhibited the reserve grand champion at the FFA hog show, sells his gilt crossbreed to Hatfield Quality Meats also for $2.25 a pound.

place animal. The aged cow class was won by the cow shown by Rhonda Peterman.

The senior champion and grand champion Holstein trophies went to Lost Brook Duck Jessica, Kathryn Jarrett's 4-year-old cow.

The reserve senior champion and reserve grand championship entry was a 3-year-old Bald Eagle Count Robbie, shown by Brian Cooley.

The type judge was Creedin Corman of Carlisle. Marian Lehman, the fitting judge, is from Bloomsburg. Performing as showing judge was Dave Norman of Liberty.

The judges declared that this group of 4-H and youth showmen did an outstanding job, and more master fitting awards were distributed than in any previous roundup.

Berks County Champion Hog

Jason Manbeck of Tulpehocken High School is the champion senior fitter at the Berks County FFA hog show. Jason's family, the Oscar J. Manbeck family of Bethel, last year were named outstanding farm family in Berks County by the Reading Fair.

In the sale portion of the show, Hatfield's hog buyer, Tom Moyer, bought Chuckie for $2.25 a pound. That price was up $.25 a pound from last year.

Hatfield also purchased the reserve grand campion for the same price, a gilt crossbreed weighing 255 pounds, owned by Brian Beam of Twin Valley. Brian also won reserve grand champion at last year's show.

"We hope people will support FFA," Moyer said about his company's commitment to buying animals raised by youths. Hatfield also offered a buy-back price Wednesday of $.41 per pound.

Prices for the other 67 hogs owned by the FFA members ranged from the top price to the lowest price of $.50 a pound, with Hatfield purchasing most of the hogs.

Jason Manbeck of Tulpehocken was the champion senior fitter, noting that he painted his hog's toes black for an added touch of glitz.

"I think he (the judge) liked that," Jason said with a smile.

Richard Kerper Jr. of Oley Valley was named champion junior fitter, and Jill Burkhart of Twin Valley won the senior showmanship award.

At the end of the long day, Dan Lynch, agriculture teacher at Kutztown Area High School and one of three Berks County Ag teachers who coordinated the show, was pleased and ready to go home.

"I think the show went really well," he said.

Ron Frederick, Twin Valley ag teacher, and Jim Howe, Oley Valley ag teacher, also helped.

Jill Burkhart, left, champion senior showman, and Richard Kerper Jr., champion junior fitter, pause for a photo before heading for the ice cream truck.

Lycoming County Youth Sell Livestock

RONALD CLARK
Susquehanna Co.
Correspondent

WILLIAMSPORT (Lycoming Co.) — The Lycoming County Fair was the scene of the 13th annual Youth Livestock Sale, where more than 130 head of hogs, beef cattle, and market lambs were sold.

Although the weather was uncomfortably cool, with misty and rainy conditions, the crowd of onlookers were enthusiastic and remained throughout the long evening.

The grand champion market hog in the youth class was consigned by Nathan Jarrett and was purchased by the Country Store of Pennsdale. The selling price of this 240-pound borrow, $2.60 per pound, was overshadowed by the reserve grand champion, a York Cross gilt, which brought $3.05 per pound for its weight of 248 pounds. It was owned by Tom Springman, and was purchased by Moore Farms, Orangeville.

Springman is a Green Valley 4-H member. Jarrett is affiliated with the Bald Eagle Club.

Fifty hogs were sold, and they brought an average of 94¢ per pound. The premier hog buyer was Hatfield Meats, with Country Store having the second most purchases. Of the nine clubs which had entered market hogs in the sale, the Huntersville 4-H consigned 13, and the Bottle Run Club sold 10 of its animals.

In the market steer class, the grand champion Angus cross, at 1,214 pounds, brought $4 per pound for its owner, Doug Marquardt. It was purchased by Hoss's Steak and Beef. The reserve champion, sold by Becky Snyder, was an Angus-Simmental weighing 1,287 pounds. This animal was acquired by McDonald's, Hughsville, for $2.95 per pound.

These were two of the seven entries from the 118 Ag Club; the Bottle Run Club was second in numbers of steers consigned.

Other entries were by members of the Hillcrest, Quaker Hill, and Fairfield 4-H Clubs. On average, the steers weighed 1,160 pounds, and brought an average of $1.07 per pound. The Nicholas Packing Company was the premier buyer, with 11 other buyers participating.

The highest priced lamb was the grand champion market lamb, sold to Dale McCorcle Custom Butchers by champion Laura Lovell of the Bottle Creek 4-H. The 104-pound lamb brought $4.75 per pound.

The reserve grand champion, also from the Bottle Run Club, brought $3.20 for Angela Lovell from buyer Kinley Suburu.

A third Bottle Run lamb, the heavyweight grand champion, was sold by its owner, Janice Bower, to C. B. Beigey and brought a price of $1 per pound. These three were all of the Suffolk breed.

The lightweight grand champion was a Hampshire wether, a Polypay cross, and the Sunset Ice Cream Company paid Steven Smith $.775 per pound for this entry.

The 67 lambs entered in the sale were from eight 4-H Clubs, with the Bottle Run Club's 16 entrants, the Pioneer Valley, and Green Valley each having 12. The other clubs with lambs sold at this sale were the Bald Eagle, Fairfield, Quaker Hill, Little Muncy Creek, and Hillcrest 4-H. Most of the entries were Suffolks and Suffolk crosses. From the high of $4.75 for the grand champion, prices ranged downward to $.65 per pound.

Harold Fraley, prominent local auctioneer, had a full evening's work with the sales of all three classes of animals. He was assisted by State Senator Roger Madigan, who introduced each animal and its owner, and gave its sex and weight.

The chairman of the Livestock Sale Committee was Steven Peterman, with vice chairman Ben Hepburn, sale chairman and co-sale chairman Alice Girven, and Ringmaster David Albert.

Youth Market Steer Competition

Doug Marquardt came off with grand championship honors as he showed his heavy medium weight to advantage over the reserve grand champion, Laura Lovell's light medium weight steer. The grand champion was purchased by Eddie's Market of Lairdsville, with the reserve champion going to Snyder Equipment of Hughsville.

Placings in the various classes were as follows: Medium Lightweight: First, John Snyder; Second, Todd Paronish, and Third, Dawn Snyder. Heavy Lightweight: First, David Smith; Second, Angela Lovell; third, Adam Fraley. Light Mediumweight: First, Laura Lovell; Second, Angela Lovell; Third, Adam Fraley. Heavy Mediumweight: First, Doug Marquardt; Second, Amanda Fraley; Third, Nathan Harvey. Light Heavyweight: First, Doug Marquardt; Second, Todd Puderbach; Third, Nathan Harvey. August — A Time For Seeding Alfalfa

August generally provides good conditions for establishing alfalfa as well as cool season grasses. The soil is warm. Days become shorter and nights become cooler as fall approaches and moisture is usually adequate.

Except for winter annual weeds, such as chickweed, shepherds purse and henbit, both weeds and insects are usually less troublesome during the establishment period for late summer seedings.

And with all of the weather related problems we frequently have, August may be a good time to establish new seedings to replace stands that were lost or damaged over the summer.

To assure successful late summer alfalfa seedings on a prepared seedbed, folllow the proven rules for getting good stands. These include:

- Use adapted, multiple pest resistant alfalfa varieties.
- Besure the soil pH and soil fertility are adequate for alfalfa. As always, start with a soil test.
- Shoot for a firm seedbed to assure good moisture in the seed zone and to permit uniform, shallow coverage of seed. Seed on time - early to mid-August if possible, and use properly inoculated seed.
- Avoid attempting to establish alfalfa on fields with a potential triazene residue problem.
- Seed with a properly calibrated drill to assure uniform seeding. Normally 15-20 pounds of seed per acre is sufficient for alfalfa seeded alone, and 10-12 pounds of alfalfa per acre if seeded with a grass. Cultupacking before and after seeding is important, especially if the seedbed is dry. The fluid method of seeding has been consistently successful. But be sure to cultipack before and after seeding.
- As stated earlier, weeds and insects are usually less of a problem for late summer as compared to spring seeding; however, many alfalfa growers still prefer to use a preplant herbicide such as Eptam when grasses are not included in the mixture.

How About Inoculation?

I'd also like to review with you briefly the importance of proper inoculation.

Under favorable conditions and a continuous legume cropping history, the right kind and adequate amount of bacteria may already be present. Thus, theoretically, under these conditions additional inoculation may not be necessary.

However, in case of low pH or low fertility, drought, high soil temperatures, or persistent rains, the number of bacteria may be reduced sharply. One or more of these situations may have occurred iin your area this summer.

Under such conditions, and especially when planting alfalfa for the first time on new land, or if four or five years have passed since the previous alfalfa crop, seed definitely should be inoculated with fresh inoculant just prior to sowing. A good rule of thumb is still "when in doubt, inoculate."

Inoculation adds a fresh culture of effective rhizobia strains to seed and soil. Thus, rhizobia can begin working as the seed germinates and the plants start growing. And since protein content in legumes is directly related to nitrogen content, effective inoculation is a major key to improving yield and quality.

Pre-Inoculation

Just a word about pre-inoculation. Much of the alfalfa seed currently marketed is already pre-inoculated with the proper rhizobia strain. Newer pre-inoculation techniques have proven highly effective and have extended the shelf life over conventional humus-based pre-inoculants.

Nevertheless, pre-inoculated seed carried over from spring for August seedings should, in my opinion, be re-inoculated just prior to seeding, especially with the weather conditions we had again this year.

Remember, when in doubt, inoculate.

No-Till Seedings In Stubble

Many growers have found that no-tilling alfalfa into a small grain stubble in August is one of the most foolproof seeding techniques for this time of year. Moisture, either too much or too little, is less of a limiting factor in this type of seeding.

But there are several rules you should follow to assure a successful no-till establishment. These include:

- Competition from other plants must be eliminated or minimized.
- Heavy thatch and plant growth tall enough to shade the soil surface must be removed.
- You must protect the seedlings from insects, especially if you seed in sod.
- The soil fertility must be medium to high with pH above 6.5.
- Seeding date is not as critical with a no-till compared with a conventional seeding. Nevertheless, except for seedings made in the southernmost part of our area, seedings should be made before September.

One caution. In recent years we have noted more of a problem from the disease sclerotinia crown and stem rot, especially in late summer no-till seedings in stubble or sod — and particularly in, but not limited to, Ohio, Virginia, and Maryland. In fact, because of this problem, some growers are now shying away from late summer no-till seedings, especially in the states mentioned above. It is another risk mainly in fields that contained lots of other plants that carry the disease, and a threat you should be aware of.

IXL
Anti-Friction Metal Conditioner

Efficiency is our Newest Resource

Science brings a new dimension to Anti-Friction

An oil additive metal conditioner product ahead of its time, IXL will give your equipment priceless protection. IXL gives protection far superior to just oil or lubricants. IXL is specifically designed to be used in: (NEW) and (USED) gasoline & diesel engines, compressors, automatic & manual transmissions, hydraulics, gear boxes, bearings of all types, turbos, pumps, and much more. IXL is a metal conditioner which treats all ferrous metals 3 to 5 microns deep, thereby making the metal surfaces harder, denser and smoother. These results are minimum metal wear, giving maximum engine and machine life. IXL reduces heat, friction, and wear, up to 60% without changing tolerances, reducing friction will release energy previously expended to overcome ordinary mechanical resistance. This energy is now available as a positive force, working to increase power, performance and fuel savings. IXL also helps maintain and recondition seals and gaskets, by keeping these items pliable, firm, and flexible. It will help prevent leaks, however IXL is not a lubricant fortifier, such as PTFE, Moly, or graphite. IXL is biodegradable, NON-TOXIC and environmentally safe. IXL is one of the highest quality products on the market today. IXL is satisfaction guaranteed or your money back.

What makes our bales ideal for your operation? Start with the pickup. It reduces chafing because the low profile minimizes hay lift. It's mounted close to the ground so you gain good ground gauging and clean crop retrieval, too. A large feed opening lets you work in a variety of crops and field conditions. At the same time it's tolerant to crop moisture, large bunches of hay, or foreign objects in the windrow.

Harvest your crop with the best in self-propelled harvesting

If you custom harvest as well as chop your own forage, a self-propelled harvester like the Model 1915 can help you harvest more crop at peak quality. The fuel-efficient 270-horsepower diesel engine and the 24-inch, 12-knife cutterhead give you high-capacity day-in and day-out harvesting. And the exclusive automatic knife sharpener and automatic shearbar adjuster, called Accucut™, combine to give you precision-sharpened knives and a reset shearbar, all from the comfort of the cab.

Stop in today and let us show you the other features of the "1915." Or better yet, let's set up a time to demonstrate this harvester in your own field.

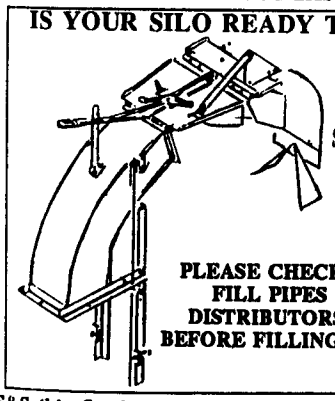
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH CORN SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

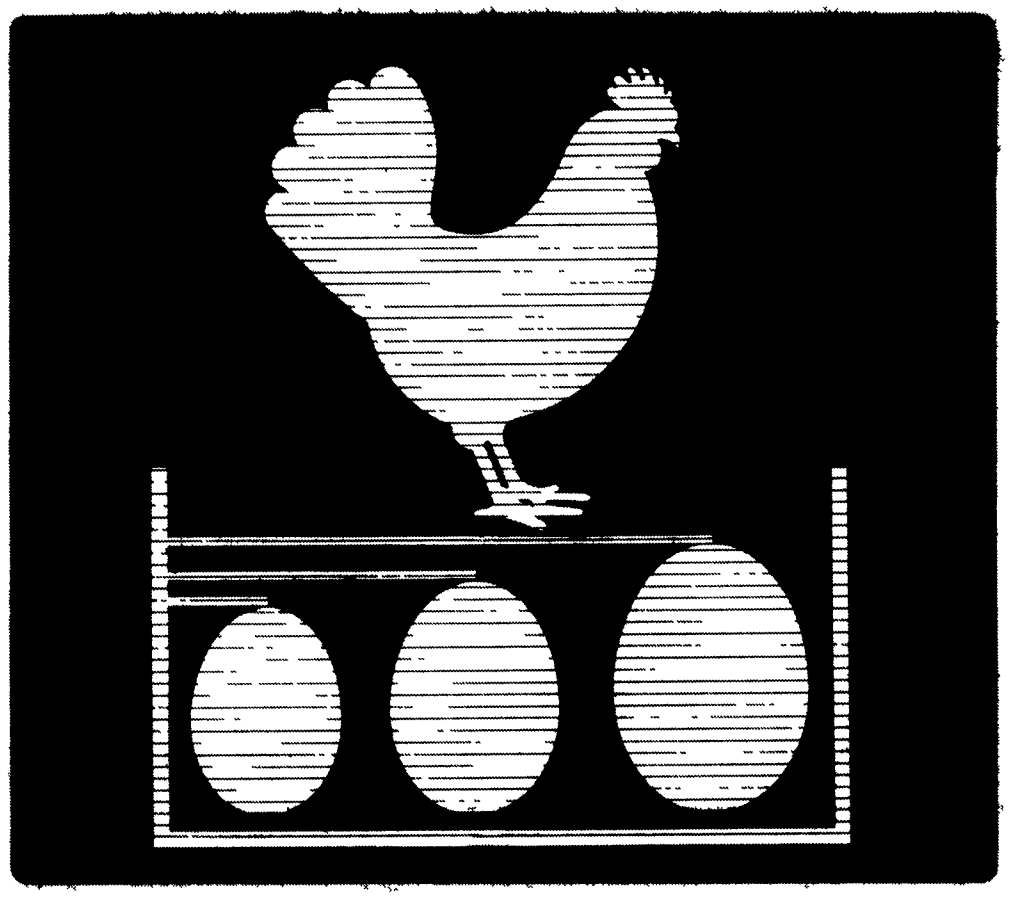
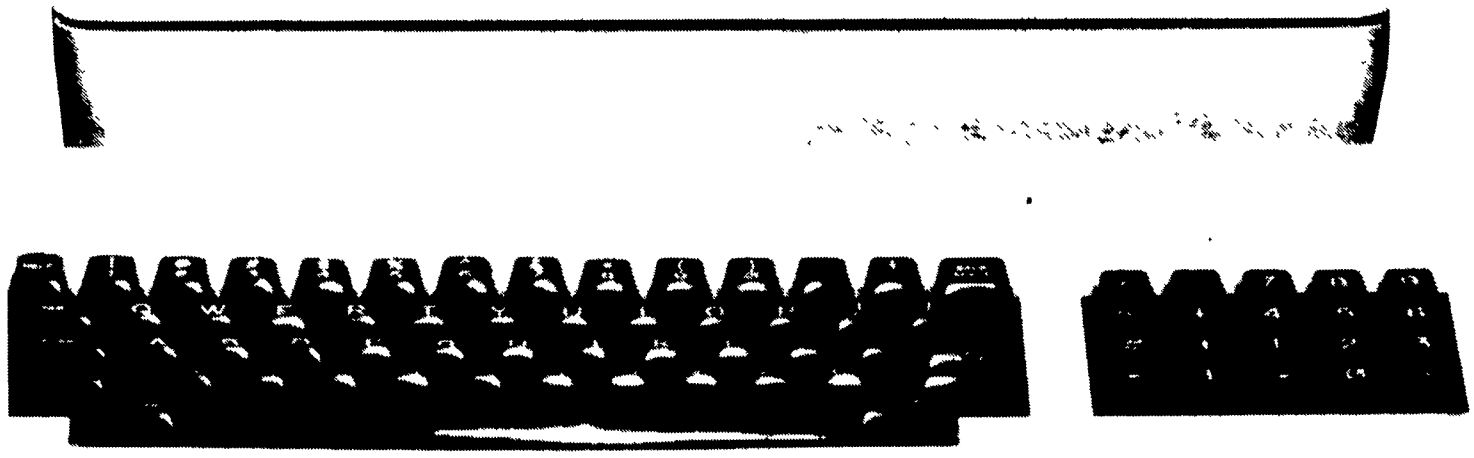
ACCU-LINE™

LAYER FEEDING

PROGRAMS FOR PROFITS





At Purina Mills, we have developed our entire commercial layer feeding system to produce the correct size egg for the right marketing program. At times you can increase your income per dozen by as much as 6 cents by increasing your egg size by only 1 percent. At other times, implementing feeding and management practices that could result in a 3 percent decrease in egg size can save as much as 2 cents per dozen in cost.

The laying hen will not make these adjustments on her own. We need to help her with the correct feeding and management programs. Purina Mills, Inc. has a variety of suggestions to help in these periods of competitive pressures that will help the egg producer's bottom line. Below is a partial list of these programs.

Accu-Line pullet feeds and programs to grow the best pullet for maximum performance.

Accu-Line Bio-Mittent™ lighting programs to save electric cost and improve performance.

Accu-Line shell-pak feeds to help produce the largest number of saleable eggs.

Accu-Line molting programs to help in getting maximum second cycle performance.

Accu-Line LimiFed™ and nutri-cycle feeding programs. Exclusive ideas that are still ahead of many in the industry.

Please Call Purina Mills, Inc. at 717-737-1236, Paul Hahn at 717-560-9229, Bob Kieselowsky at 717-842-8271 or your Local Purina Dealer to Request Information On The Many Commercial Egg Programs That We Have Available.
